Tries to Blind Bridegroom With Acid

HOLD LEADERS FOR RIOT

GIRL GETS BAD BURNS HERSELF

Miss Moriarty's Attempts to to Disfigure Young Man at Festivities.

SHE GOES TO HOSPITAL

SPRINGFIELD, June 11.—Miss Johanna Moriarty, a pretty housemaid, twenty, was so infuriated because Timothy L. Bailey, a young chauffeur, was to marry another young girl today that she tried to blind and disfigure him with acid thrown from a drinking glass.

The bridegroom's brother, John, caught Miss Moriarty's arm just in time to divert most of the fluid from his brother, but it was dashed into Miss Moriarty's own face and burned her so severely that the doctors for a time despaired of her sight. She is in a serious condition at the Merry Hospital today.

Her face was swathed in bandages and she was suffering great pain, while her rival, Miss Katherine McCarthy of No. 151 Colton street, was being led to the altar by Bailey.

The only sign that the chauffeur showed of the encounter was a red scar on the side of his neck, where a spray of the acid struck. In spite of Miss Moriarty's alleged attack, the wedding ceremony went through as scheduled. Miss Moriarty will be arrested on the charge of assault as soon as she is discharged from the hospital.

Bailey, who is twenty-five and reported to be a steady fellow, has been employed for some time by Dr. Joseph Herrick in West Springfield.

Find Boy of 12 Drunk on Street

In Whiskey Stupor in Cambridge, Banner No-License City of State.

Arthur Canty, a well-dressed lad of twelve, who said he lived at No. 3 Harrison street, Somerville, was found staggering drunk in Central square, Cambridge, today by Patrolman Rowe.

The policeman rubbed his eyes and looked twice to make sure.

"Whiskey, too!" he gasped.

The lad was hurried to the Cambridge Infirmary and tucked into a nice white bed to sober off. The police are investigating.

PAULINE HERRICK, "Venus" who says she needs at least seven servants. Her husband must be worth $100,000. Harvard student today announced he is to be her husband. Photograph by Aram.

James Davis of Westmorely Hall, Cambridge, a Harvard student, whom Pauline Herrick, the model with Venus' measurements, named as her fiance, today defended the girl's conduct.

Davis was in court today when Miss Herrick expected to receive sentence. Her case was again postponed.

Davis says he comes from Kansas City, and not from Springfield, as was at first reported. His allowance, he says, is $5,000—"And of course I have a pretty good time with that," he added:

Here is Davis' story:

"Miss Herrick and I are engaged. As soon as I can get her out of this, we will be married.

"My $5,000 allowance will take care of us, I guess. I understand that the Harvard authorities are planning to suspend me. If they do, I'll take Miss Herrick back to Kansas City and I'll go into business with my father there. Father is one of the biggest wool merchants in the West. He's sore now—has written me a couple of letters raising Cain over this, but he'll come around.

"Pauline is a square girl and a good sport—a girl any man can be proud of. I respect her. She has been deceived by the other man. I'm no Kid McCoy, but if I ever meet him—well, I'll guarantee he'll regret it.

"Miss Herrick is a beautiful girl. She has worked as a cloak model, and has posed for artists and photographers here and in New York. She's even done a little on the stage. She's a wonder!

"While our engagement hasn't been announced, it is true that we are to be married. Just as soon as I get her out of this, we will be married and I'll take her away somewhere."

Miss Herrick's case was postponed till Friday to give further opportunity to investigate before passing sentence. Just before her case was called in court, she told some of the reporters her ideas of marriage and other things. She said:

"If I married a man," she said, "I would make sure that he had at least $100,000 in cash. Fifteen rooms, and the means for substantial servants. I do not care for many servants, but consider seven about the right number.

"I love children, and if I were married I'd keep myself surrounded by a whole orphan asylum full of them. I believe in motherhood as the great duty of women.

"I don't want any man to support me, however.

SUES, NAMING DIVORCED WIFE OF J. B. DUKE

NEW YORK, June 11.—Mrs. Katherine Soper Sperne, wife of former Congressman Pence of Colorado, today filed papers in a suit for separation, alleging extreme cruelty and amendment and naming Mrs. Lillian N. Duke, divorced wife of J. B. Duke, the multi-millionaire tobacco magnate. Mrs. Pence has also instructed her attorney, Clarke L. Jordan, to bring suit for $150,000 against Mrs. Duke on the charge of alienating the affections of Mr. Pence. Mrs. Duke is said to be worth close to $1,000,000 in her own right.

Mrs. Pence charges that detectives in her employ obtained the information that Pence and Mrs. Duke were living together in a fashionable Broadway apartment house. The defendant and correspondent, Mrs. Pence also alleges, lived together at the Ritzel house in Washington and traveled together in South. Mrs. Pence refused to ask for a divorce in order to keep her husband from marrying Mrs. Duke. Mrs. Pence before her marriage was a Kentucky belle, being the daughter of Colonel Robert Soper of Georgetown, Ky. Mr. Pence has been mentioned as a possible ambassador.

Barbers' Bill Up to Foss.

By a vote of 23 to 9 the Senate today passed to its final stage and sent up to the Governor the bill providing for the registration of barbers and the appointment of a barbers' commission.

SUSTAIN ELECTRIC LIGHT VETO

Senate by Vote of 30 to 0 Upholds Governor's Objection to Stock Inflation.

BILL IS RUSHED THROUGH

The Senate today by a vote of 30 to 0 sustained the Governor's veto of the bill which would have allowed electric light and power companies to issue three times the amount of bonds and twice the amount of preferred stock as they had common stock already issued.

The bill also allowed the companies to deprive the preferred stock of any voting power.

Governor Foss vetoed the bill and the AMERICAN supported him in the veto because by the provisions of the bill it would have been possible for a very small minority in interest in such a corporation to control the corporation against the interests and the will of the great majority of the preferred stock, bears and bondholders.

As the Governor pointed out in his message, it could work out this way:

A corporation having $900,000 of securities could be controlled by $51,000 in common stock, and the other $849,000 would be helpless.

This is a victory for the Governor and shows the evil or cunning these important measures through the Legislature in the closing hour of the session without sufficient consideration. The corporations constantly practice this trick. This important bill passed the Senate without debate the first time.

The Trolley Merger Bill was rushed through the Senate in the same way at the last moment and if the Governor vetoes it the whole Senate will be interested to see if the Senators have the courage and character to sustain his veto also of this bill.

Nurses and Milk to Save the Babies

To reduce infant mortality in Boston during the coming Summer months, Mayor Fitzgerald announced today that he would approve of the appointment of ten temporary nurses for the health department.

The new nurses will work particularly in the congested sections of the city where the mortality record is the highest, and are appointed upon the recommendation of the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association.

The health department will also provide funds to supply modified milk to the poorer families. Last year this milk was supplied out of the personal funds of Dr. William J. Gallivan of the hygiene bureau of the health department.

Mayor's Veto on Shorter Firemen

Mayor Fitzgerald this afternoon vetoed the ordinance passed by the City Council making the minimum height and weight 5 feet 6 inches and 135 pounds.

The ordinance was vetoed upon the recommendation of Fire Commissioner Cole. He believes that the present standard of 5 feet 7 inches and 140 pounds operates to secure the best physical class of men for the fire service.

Lewis E. Merry Dies Suddenly at Bank

Lewis E. Merry dropped dead from heart failure in the Fourth Atlantic National Bank this noon. Mr. Merry was a prominent baker of Boston, and was a director of the Charlestown Five Cents Savings Bank, West Somerville Co-operative Bank and Somerville Hospital.

PREMIER AND AIDE ARE SLAIN

Shot Down from Ambush While Riding in Constantinople Streets.

VICTIMS OF A SPITE PLOT

LONDON, June 11.—Mahmud Shefket Pasha, Grand Vizier of Turkey, and his military aide were shot to death today by two assassins in the streets of Constantinople.

News of the double assassination was first received here in private advices. Later it was officially confirmed.

Mahmud Shefket Pasha and his aide were automobiling to the Sublime Porte when the murderers, who stood near the entrance of the building, fired upon the motor car with deadly aim.

Mahmud Shefket Pasha, who came into power in February, has been exercising the prerogatives of military dictator. He was one of the chief leaders of the Young Turk party and the closest adviser of Enver Bey, the commander in chief of the Turkish army.

The Grand Vizier was undoubtedly slain in revenge for the murder of Nasim Pasha, War Minister and commander in chief of the Ottoman army, who was shot down by Enver Bey last Winter.

Leaves Mass to Meet Death by Auto

Mrs. Bridget Dougherty, seventy-two years, of No. 681 Western avenue, Lynn, was killed today in Lynn by being struck by a touring car driven by Park Commissioner Frank W. Atkins.

The accident occurs in front of the Corbett School on Franklin street. Mrs. Dougherty was returning from attending mass at St. Mary's Church, and, while attempting to cross the street, stepped in front of the auto, which was going at a moderate rate.

Mr. Atkins took the unfortunate woman in his auto and speeded for the hospital, but shortly after her arrival, Mrs. Dougherty died.

Quincy Mother Loses Fingers for Child

Mrs. Daniel J. Holmes of No. 22 Hershey street, Wollaston, carries her left hand in a bandage today, minus the thumb and the three larger fingers, which were blown off when she pulled a dynamite cap from between the teeth of Joseph, her two-year-old son.

Mr. Holmes is building a house on Ocean street, Atlantic. He left the box containing dynamite caps within reach of the little boy.

The infant was chewing one of the caps when his mother discovered what he had done just in time, it is believed, to save his life.

Loan Brokers Fined $100 Each

J. J. Meyers, a loan agent representing the Employes Discount Company, with offices in the Carney Building, and George L. Rosinson of No. 68 Congress street, pleaded guilty and were each fined $100 for violating the rule of loan agencies.

Mr. Brown announced today that next Thursday he will summons between forty and fifty loan agents to his office at No. 6 Park street, where he will impress upon them the necessity of living up to the law.

Kill Charlestown Subway in Senate

The Senate by a vote of 32 to 0 today killed the bill providing for the demolition of the elevated structure in Charlestown and the substitution of a tunnel under Main street.

Demand Reason for Release of Spy

British Government Called Upon to Explain German's Freedom.

LONDON, June 11.—The English government was called upon officially in the House of Commons today to explain why Dr. A. K. Graves, a former German spy, was released from a Scottish prison before his term was up and now it comes that he has such intimate details of affairs in the admiralty office. Dr. Graves, who claims to have been liberated on his agreement to enter the English Secret Service against Germany, is believed to be in New York.

Thomas McKinnon Wood, Parliamentary Under Secretary for the Foreign Office, made the following statement in reply to questions:

"Dr. Graves was sentenced to a year and a half for espionage at Edinburgh last July. In December he was released from prison because of ill health. I do not know that any conditions were imposed upon him nor do I know his address."

This statement did not suit the members of the opposition and notice was given that the government would soon be interpellated again on the subject.

Uproar in Commons at Hail of 'Bombs'

Man Sympathizer of Suffrage Cause Arrested After Wild Scene.

LONDON, June 11.—A male sympathizer of the woman suffrage cause created a wild scene in the House of Commons this afternoon and was arrested after he had struggled like a maniac for over fifteen minutes.

Armed with a number of "bombs" composed of paper bags filled with flour and a great sheaf of suffragette pamphlets, the man gained access to the spectators' gallery. He remained quiet until Premier Asquith started to address the Commons; then he stood up and hurled several scors of pamphlets from the gallery.

The members of the Commons looked up in alarm at this cloudburst of literature, but while they were still open-mouthed the male suffrage adherent drew back his arm and fired a bomb at Mr. Asquith. The missile missed its mark, but struck a parliamentary clerk in the face. He fell to the floor and arose looking like a ghost.

A member sitting near the ministerial bench started to shout a protest when a big bag of flour struck him in the mouth and he dashed gasping and choking to get a drink of water. By this time members were dashing toward the stairway to the gallery and were screaming for the police to arrest the miscreant. Flour bombs were dropping and popping like ballstones.

HUSBAND AND WIFE ACCUSED

Pingrees and Hermann Named as Leaders in Tragedy in Ipswich Strike.

15 OTHERS ARRAIGNED

Carroll L. Pingree and his wife, Mary L. Pingree, both of Lowell, and Nathan Hermann of Boston, all I. W. W. organizers, were held without bail for the Grand Grand Jury by Judge Charles A. Hayward in Ipswich District Court today on charges of inciting a riot which resulted in murder, in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Nicoletta Pasquopolon, a spectator, in the bloody clash between police and Ipswich Hosiery Mill strikers the night before.

Thomas J. Holliday, national secretary of the textile branch of the I. W. W., who was arrested in front of Ipswich Town Hall by City Marshal Patrick Lehan of Salem, soon after Holliday arrived in Ipswich today, was held in $100 bail for a continued hearing on a charge of violating a town ordinance by attempting to start a parade without a permit.

Eighteen others were arraigned, including five women. They are striking operatives, charged with rioting, assaulting police, and similar offences. The first of these to be heard were held in amounts averaging $30ot for continued hearings.

While the court proceedings were in progress the police and Selectmen exercised the utmost measures to preserve law and order, short of actually appealing for troops.

The Selectmen will rely upon police assistance just as long as possible. Only the gravest emergency will drive them to asking the Governor to send soldiers.

Charles Hull, chairman of the board, said this noon:

"The local authorities have the situation well in hand now, with the aid of the extra police secured from out of town. We have almost two hundred police now on strike duty.

"We will not ask for troops unless the community and some grave occasion both demand it. The board has decided not to appeal to the Governor for such assistance unless the gravest emergency arises."

The death and injury list from the riot of last night has been hard to get accurately, so far as injuries go, because many of those who were clubbed by the police were taken to their homes by relatives and friends.

WOOD COUNSEL EXONERATED IN BRIBERY CASE

The probe hearing today to investigate the attempted jury bribery of Juror Morris Shuman in the Wood-Attearn-Collins dynamite conspiracy lasted just fifteen minutes.

Attorney Henry F. Hurlburt withdrew his demand for an opportunity to cross-examine himself in open court of all inquiries in connection with the case. He said he understood the Grand Jury investigation had shown that neither the attorneys nor any one else connected with the defendants in the case had had in any way implicated in the attempted bribery.

District Attorney Pelletier said this was quite true—that a rigid investigation had failed to implicate any lawyer or defendant in any way.

Judge Crosby said:

"The jury system is the pride and glory of the State. I should have been sorry for anything tending to instill a distrust of juries in the popular mind. I am glad the Grand Jury's investigation has shown there was no connection between any attorneys or defendants in this case and this attempted bribery."

The Grand Jury will tomorrow conclude its investigation, having adjourned. District Attorney Pelletier said, out of deference to the court. All the Wood-Attearn-Collins jurors were in court today, with the attorneys in the case.

Atwood Safe in Lake Erie Flight

Forced by Engine Trouble to Make Most of Trip on Water.

SANDUSKY, O., June 11.—Aviator Harry N. Atwood, who left Keuka, Michigan, at 3 p. m. yesterday for a flight across Lake Erie in a hydroeroplane, arrived here at 1:35 a. m. today, having made practically all the trip traveling on the surface of the water. Atwood's arrival quieted fears that he had been lost and a search party was being organized as he got in.

Engine trouble compelled Atwood to descend ten minutes after leaving Keuka. Subsequent attempts to rise were futile. The experiments here are being made with a view to an attempted trans-Atlantic flight. Atwood gained fame by flying from New York to St. Louis.

Marion Bishop to Be a Countess at Last

Announces Engagement; to Realize Dream of Childhood.

NEW YORK, June 11.—So eager was Mrs. Marion Bishop, a young widow of Montgomery, Ala., to marry a titled foreigner that after her husband's death she went to Italy and mingled with purchasable counts and princes.

Mrs. Bishop today announced her engagement to Count Lionel Moretti, a retired lieutenant of the Italian army. She said:

"It was a dream of my childhood to be a countess. When I first reached Italy I found quite an expensive selection of titles and I took my time in deciding on Count Moretti. It was more or less a business proposition with us both—he had a title and I had money. His price was high but he was far superior to a Russian prince whose fingers were stained by cigarette smoking.

"The Count Moretti has snow white hands as soft as a woman's. His nails are beautifully manicured and creates a sensation every time he enters a cafe. So, as soon as I have settled my affairs here, I am going to marry the Count in the Fall."

Mrs. Bishop said the prices of counts fluctuated a good deal but she would not say what Count Moretti has cost her. Her husband was an iron manufacturer.

THREATEN CIVIL WAR IN IRELAND OVER HOME RULE

LONDON, June 11.—Bitter speeches marked the passing on its second reading of the Irish Home Rule Bill, by the House of Commons, by a vote of 367 to 270. Civil war in Ireland was threatened by the opponents of the measure, if the enforcement of the law should be attempted, Sir Edward Carson, adopting the belligerent attitude which has characterized his stand on the bill throughout, in support of the Ulsterites and Unionists.

A campaign against the bill will be started immediately throughout England and Scotland, in opposition to the measure, which will assuredly be defeated when it reaches the House of Lords.

While the House can now in no way amend the present bill, suggestions for amendments can be made to the House of Lords, which has the power under the House of Lords Act of 1911, to adopt or throw down such suggestions. Following the inevitable rejection of the bill by the Lords, it will be necessary for the Commons to pass it once more within two years, when it will become a law without the Lords' concurrence.

Meanwhile, it is believed that there is a possibility that the present government may not last long enough to pass the bill again, although the Conservatives and Unionists, without any constructive platform, might, even if returned to power, last but a short time, it is believed.

King George's Flyer in Canadian Pacific Cost Him $100,000

LONDON, June 11.—King George is holding daily conferences with Sir George White, his private solicitor, it became known today, as a consequence of heavy losses suffered in the recent big slump of the stock market. The consultations are to arrange for the realization on securities held in trust for the King by Lord Stamfordham and another member of the household, and the Queen takes part in the conferences.

The King's losses are understood to have resulted from extensive operations undertaken on his behalf in Canadian Pacific. Last week that stock declined 14 points in the London market, and the King's loss is stated to be $100,000.

Lord Revelstoke is the King's private financial adviser, but the operations in Canadian Pacific were undertaken contrary to that banker's advice.

Bed Bugs Carry Dread Disease

Dr. Rosenau Says Virus of Infantile Paralysis Is Found on Insect.

Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine in Harvard Medical School, told the Massachusetts Medical Society at their annual meeting today in the Copley-Plaza that the virus of infantile paralysis had been found in the bug known as the bedbug, which can carry the germ. This bug is the ordinary bedbug.

"It has been found that infantile paralysis is contagious," declared Dr. Rosenau. "It is an insect born disease. It is carried by dust and it is an alimentary infection.

"Man and the monkey are the only animals that can have the disease. It is a disease found in the mouth and throat and its virus has been found in the intestinal tract. It may be found in the ordinary stable fly. The common house fly carries the virus on the outside. The common mosquito does not carry the virus."

Vahey Pleads for Carmen with Foss

Vahey, former Democratic candidate for Governor, today, representing the delegates of carmen from all over the State, made a half hour appeal to the Governor not to veto the bill passed by the Legislature providing that the working hours of the street car men should be nine hours within eleven. He stated that some of the men are working twelve hours in sixteen and some others nine in sixteen.

LONDON, June 11.—A mighty procession of women, all clad in black, will march through the streets of London with the funeral cortege in honor of the memory of Miss Emily Welding Davison, the militant suffragette who was fatally injured by interfering with the King's horse during the Derby at the Epsom Downs race course.

The headquarters of the union were draped in black today in honor of Miss Davison.

"Kitty" Marion, an actress, and Clara E. Given, suffragettes arrested yesterday for setting fire to the grandstand at Hurst Park race course, were arraigned today, but later were remanded until Saturday in default of $15,000 bail.

She eluded them today, ran for the bathroom and slammed the door after her. When the sister opened the door, the dead body fell at her feet. She was despondent because her three-year-old daughter had been ill in the Children's Hospital for months.

'FORGIVE PECK,' SAYS WIFE NO. 1 TO MISS QUINN

Professor Harry Thurston Peck's first wife, who is nursing him at her home near Greenwich, Ct., believes that the forgiveness of Esther Quinn, the Cambridge girl, who sued Professor Peck for breach of promise, will save his life.

"I believe that Miss Quinn's forgiveness is all that is needed to make him a well man," she said. The present Mrs. Peck was not financially able to care for her husband in his illness and accepted the first wife's offer to be nurse.

The first wife wants Miss Quinn to write Professor Peck a letter forgiving him for whatever injury she believes he did her.

Dr. Turner, a Christian Science reader, who is treating Professor Peck, has written to Miss Quinn telling her that the future of the former Columbia University teacher depends on her forgiveness.

Miss Quinn sued Dr. Peck for alleged breach of promise of marriage, asking $50,000 damages. The suit was brought just after Peck's second marriage, which was to a high school teacher of New York. The legal action brought about indirectly Professor Peck's removal from the Latin chair of Columbia. The suit was dismissed on a technicality. Miss Quinn sued again for a like sum. That action has not been tried.

His first wife said:

"I don't believe Professor Peck ever promised to marry her, but I don't hold him blameless. 'Vengeance is mine; I will repay,' is for the Lord, not for us, to act upon. Mr. Turner told me he intended to write to Miss Quinn's attorney and ask that she be induced to help in his efforts to restore the professor's health. Many kind letters have come from friends, including President Butler of Columbia."

(ALL 1913 MODELS—FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN)

WILLIAM SHEINWALD, 40 Summer St.

N. B. REMEMBER—I AM COMING BACK SEPT. 1st WITH A BRAND NEW FALL STOCK. I am sure you will miss me the two months that I am out of business, during July and August. I am the man who forced down the prices of shoes in Boston and compelled the big stores to put in bargain basements in an effort to compete with me. I am the first man to sell women's shoes as low as 67c—a man's shoe as low as $1.35—a boy's shoe as low as 67c, and a child's shoe as low as 37c.

Remember, I told the public last week that I could find no large ground floor store in the shopping district that I could hire to accomodate my enormous stock and big trade following. No property owner would give me a short time lease of two months—July and August—during which time my present store at 40 Summer Street is being rebuilt because of the big fire damage of Sunday, March 9th. I am telling you this, my friends, because I want you to help me. In helping me by buying shoes at this sale you help yourselves—because you never did, and after this sale, you never can—get such bargains in shoes as I now MUST give you.

Remember—when I get back to 40 Summer Street in September I cannot sell this Summer's models. It will be too late. I cannot store them now—I have no choice—I must practically give them away. While my selling days here are numbered and I must suffer an awful loss, still it is encouraging to me to know that I will make hundreds of new friends, by these great bargains, who will remember Sheinwald when they buy their Fall and Winter Shoes.

"VASSAR COLLEGE" PENNANTS WITH NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

250 POLICE GUARD IPSWICH FROM NEW CLASH IN STRIKE CRISIS

Demonstration Feared at Funeral of Woman Killed in Riot.

fives or friends. But the casualty results are estimated as follows:

One woman shot and killed.

Five wounded by revolver shots, one dying.

Five other injuries reported.

Two women estimated injured but not reported.

The tragedy of Mrs. Nicoletta Pantopoulo has had a sobering effect upon the riotous portion of the community for the present.

Injured Woman in Bad Shape.

It was reported from Salem Hospital today that Mrs. Flora Cornelius, of No. 36 Saltonstall street, who was shot through the right thigh, is on the "danger list, while in a hospital surgeon's usual way of saying a patient may die. The others in Salem Hospital were reported as "comfortable."

The news that Mrs. Pantelopoulo was the wage support of seven people, including her old mother, has added an extra touch of pathos to her case.

Threats were gnashed by the police today with some apprehension lest they lead to renewed disorder. These were:

The court arraignment of the twenty-three men and women under arrest.

The noon hour, when strikebreakers would be out of the mills.

The funeral of Mrs. Pantelopoulo in the afternoon, following an autopsy by Drs. Bailey, McArthur and McAlister.

The Town Hall, in which the District Court and lock-up are located, was so well guarded that it was thought the hearing would not be disturbed.

But the coming and going of strikebreakers at noon and the funeral of the murdered woman offered more possibilities of trouble. The funeral was scheduled to be held in the Greek church, and every striker bidden to attend. The effect of the funeral services upon a body of sympathizers with the strike cause was a source of grave concern to the police.

Three new arrests were made today, in addition to the twenty made in and after last night's riot. The first two taken today were Nickles Kingon and Peter Gimely, strikers. They were accused of taking part in the riot.

The third arrest, that of Thomas J. Mollitly, the U. W. W. leader, came shortly before the arraignment of the defendants. It was noticeable that the arrest was made by an out-of-town officer, City Marshal Linan of Salem, who did not wait for trouble to begin, but took Mollitly in just as a parade was being organized.

The strikers were defended in court by Harry M. Hayward, son of Judge Hayward, who presided on the bench.

The prisoners were found to be wearing badges: "Don't Scab in Ipswich."

An autopsy this noon upon the body of Mrs. Nicoletta Pantelopolou, who was killed in last night's riot, showed that the woman was shot in the top of the head by someone standing in front of or at a point higher than she was. The bullet entered the skull about halfway back from the forehead on the left side and ranged down and back to just inside the skull wall on the right lower side of the back, about midway between the ear and the nape of the neck. The bullet was so flattened as to prevent its calibre being told except by an expert. No decision was announced whether the bullet was from a police revolver or not.

District Attorney Henry C. Attwill of Essex County was expected from Lynn at any moment, to take personal charge of an investigation into the death of Mrs. Nicoletta Pantelopolou, a spectator who was shot and killed in the riot.

The arraignment began about 11 o'clock. While this was in progress the police were apprehensive of the noon hour, when the strikebreakers had to come on; from and return to the hosiery mills.

Blocks of patrolmen were grouped along Saltonstall street and other approaches to the mills.

The police were equipped with clubs and armed with loaded revolvers, ready for any emergency.

The strikers did not crowd along the streets today. A few pickets were sent out early, but there was no trouble.

Whatever riotous feelings strikers or others may have felt today, they were cowed by the presence of reserve police, brought from surrounding cities and towns, to reinforce the local officers.

Strikebreakers were thoroughly guarded on their way to work today, the police patrolling the streets and clustering strongly at the mill gates, along Saltonstall street—where the riot occurred—and at other threatening points.

There were twenty other operatives arrested in the riot, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Pingree and Nathan Herman. All were charged with rioting and they included the following:

John Cutso, George Popbas, Atheas Loukopoulos, Angela Georgeakwan, Mary P. Napolos, Stavros Philliphoulos, Anna Philippoulos, Angelo Gouo, Zokalo Loukopoulos, Peter Cougoulos, John P. Kaunios and Christen Zekos.

It was expected that additional warrants—possibly to the number of twenty or thirty—would be issued today against men and women charged with taking part in the riot of the night before.

The most seriously wounded as the result of the riot are:

MRS. FLORA CORNELIUS, thirty-six, of No. 36 Saltonstall street, shot through the right thigh. Mar dile.

MRS. PANAGIOLA PAGANI, thirty-five, of No. 45 Saltonstall street, a mill operative, shot in the left cheek.

GEORGE KALIVAS, fifty-eight, of No. 16 Market street, a striker, shot in the left thigh; condition not serious.

STAFFIS JOROKOPOULOS, eighteen, a fruit dealer, of No. 16 Saltonstall street, shot through the left ankle; probably will be crippled.

PAPASKAS, twenty-five, residing on Topsfield road, a striker, shot in the right knee; condition not serious.

Detachments of police from other cities arrived through the night, while every incoming train from midnight on was carefully watched by the authorities, to prevent further importations of I. W. W. strike leaders. Many passengers were questioned by the police.

The police station was turned into a temporary hospital, all of the wounded people sheltered within its walls under arrest. Fifteen strikers were in the number, suffering from shot wounds and bruises from clubs and stones.

District Attorney Henry C. Atwill today declared that he would immediately start an investigation of the killing of Mrs. Pantelopou. Comment upon the firing by the police has been aroused over the disclosure of the fact that a majority of the revolver wounds on strikers are below their knees, the argument being that the officers fired low in an endeavor to wound but not to kill.

One of the earliest arrivals of reinforcements came from Salem, and was headed by Mayor John F. Hurley, wearing his inevitable silk hat. The delegation of fifteen additional officers from Lawrence was headed by M. J. Leonard, commissioner of public safety of the city of Lawrence. Haverhill and Beverly police arrived not long after the Salem contingent.

Leaders Accuse Police.

Charges that the police were responsible for the rioting, and that the first revolver shots came from some of the uniformed men, are made by the I. W. W. leaders from their cells.

"The police provoked the crowd to riot," declared Carroll L. Pingree. "They fired first. They thought that their good thing might be taken away from them by the town meeting last night, so they tried to make good."

The police, on the other hand, place the responsibility for the rioting and the subsequent death of Mrs. Pantelopolou entirely on the strikers, and claim that the first revolver shots came from the second door of a house on Saltonstall street.

It is declared that the attack by the strikers was preconcerted.

The Situation in the Ipswich Strike

One thousand on strike.

Five hundred strike-breakers.

One dead after riot.

Three reported dying.

Ten in all reported injured.

Forty (estimated) injured.

Three hundred police on guard.

Three under arrest for "inciting to riot."

Twenty per cent. wage increase asked by strikers.

Ipswich Hosiery Mills affected.

GIRL SUPPORTED SEVEN OTHERS ON $7 A WEEK WAGE

Nicoletta Pantelopoulou, shot to death in the Ipswich strike riot last night, supported seven others on her wages of less than $7 a week. Now, the seven are destitute.

She was one of six sisters, of whom one was married. This sister's husband went to Greece to serve in the Balkan war and has not returned. The wife had been at work in the mills, but was on strike. The others in the family are the mother and the girls' brother. All except Nicoletta worked in the mill when the strike came. She was the only one not thrown out of work. Since the strike began—for eight weeks—they lived on their meager savings and on her salary.

The combined earnings of the family before the strike totaled $28. That is the way it was divided:

The mother, 62 years old, earned $1.60.

The eldest sister, 28, earned $6.50.

Another sister, 23, earned $8.50.

Still another, 22, earned $5.50.

A fourth sister, 16, earned $4.50.

The brother, 14, earned $1.

The youngest sister, 12, was allowed to stay at home and do the housework. She was the pet of the family. Now she will have to go to work in the mills.

Nicoletta's own earnings ranged between $6.50 and $7. Before the strike the Pandelopoulos were pretty prosperous and ranked well with their neighbors. But just as a big family means wealth when the mills are running, among textile employes, a big family means grinding poverty when the mills are closed, so many more mouths to feed.

The six members of the family employed in the mill where the strike came joined with others in demanding a 20 per cent. increase in salary. That would allow the youngest girls to have a little time to play as other children do. So they cheerfully faced a period of privation, depending on the earnings of Nicoletta to like them over.

Now that Nicoletta has been shot down—whether by a fellow employe or a policeman is yet to be determined—the Pandelopoulos hope the strike will soon be over, so they can go back to work and earn their $32—not to that figure by the sister's death.

MAY ASK AID OF PELLETIER IN ICE PROBE

Attorney-General James M. Swift intimates that before the investigation of the Ice Trust is concluded he may call on District Attorney Pelletier and the other District Attorneys of the Commonwealth to assist him. His authority to do so is expressly stated in a new law, passed within the last two weeks by the Legislature, and in the same order which he is acting, empowering him to probe combinations which he believes may exist in restraint of trade and in violation of the anti-trust laws.

State detectives were still busy today collecting evidence, and the Attorney-General's legal assistants were considering the mass of evidence already at hand. In just what form action will be taken is not known, but developments to date promise some big surprises when the Attorney-General makes his report to the House of Representatives, at whose behest he is acting on the strength of an order framed by Representative Martin Hays.

It is said that the Federal authorities may be called into the Ice Trust investigation. Much of the ice used in Boston is shipped into Massachusetts from New Hampshire, and the ice transactions may therefore come under interstate commerce regulations.

Many Greater Boston towns and cities have already taken local action on the high price of ice. Somerville is the latest to act. Backed by the Board of Aldermen, the movement there also has the support of the West Somerville Board of Trade and the Highland Avenue Trade and Betterment Association. Mayor Burns has received a communication setting forth in detail the members' views on the ice situation from the last-named organization, and Alderman W. T. McCarthy declares that he will tomorrow night ask the Board of Aldermen to act definitely.

Along the North Shore residents of Clifton and nearby Summer resorts are talking of putting up an artificial ice plant. The same course may be taken on the South Shore, where, in Plymouth County, one dealer is said to be charging sixty cents a hundred pounds for ice.

Mayor Barry of Cambridge has been investigating the Ice Trust in that city, and promises that a report will shortly be forthcoming.

What Do You Know About the Ice Trust?

If you have information of any ice trust;

If you know of any undue raise in price or unjust discrimination on the part of any ice dealer;

If you know anything of a combination to raise or maintain prices or to divide territory

How English Beauties Keep Faces Youthful

Christian Miller, F. C. I., noted English health expert, attributes the early aging of American women to the modern fashion of sunbathing. The women of England, she says, can teach us the inestimable lesson of repose.

Another valuable lesson to be learned from the English woman is that she does not go in much for cosmetics, the continual use of which must ruin any complexion. The beauty doctors of King George's realm have the mercolized wax habit, a more wholesome method of keeping the face girlish-looking and healthy. Ordinary mercolized wax, used at night, exerts a wonderful influence for attraction. American women may easily acquire the habit, this wax being obtainable at druggists generally in the original package. It is applied at night and washed off in the morning. One ounce is sufficient to completely renovate a bad complexion. It has a peculiar action in keeping the face free from the particles of dead and devitalized scarf skin which are constantly appearing.—Woman's Herald.

Denies Removal of Richeson's Organs

What has become of the brain, heart and other organs of Clarence V. T. Richeson, slayer of Avis Linnell?

Reports from Amherst, Va., state the body is filled with sawdust and the organs are missing.

Medical Examiner Magruth, who performed the autopsy on Richeson's body, following the latter's electrocution for the murder, declared today the body left his care intact.

As a result, much mystery surrounds the reported disappearance of many portions of the former minister's anatomy. Physicians from Amherst, Va., say an investigation is likely to follow.

COLEMAN ASKS GOLDEN RULE BE PRACTISED

"Can the Golden Rule be followed in business?

"Must it be 'doing unto others as we would they should do unto you,' or will it be David Harum's rule, 'Do others or they'll do you and do it first'?" asks George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in this week's issue of the Christian Endeavor World.

"For my part, I do not want to wait either for the co-operative commonwealth or for the millennium, but by the name of God and righteous dealing and suffering humanity I want to get the Golden Rule right here and now. Begin at once to make conditions what they ought to be, no matter if they have been otherwise since the days of Methuselah. There is nothing inherently adverse to brotherliness in a simple business transaction like giving something you have in exchange for something you want. Is it not good business to get your competitor's trade and keeping him from getting yours, if you can do it without lying or misrepresenting?

"But does the Golden Rule mean that you are at liberty to get your competitor's trade, because you are willing that he should get yours, if he can. The biggest and most successful business men will tell us that where they have put in effect in their business the principles of the Golden Rule, it has turned out generally to be good business as well as good morals. Whatever may be the rule of the Standard Oil Company in dealing with its competitors, with the public, and with the government, it has been a past master in developing the application of the Golden Rule to its employes."

Urges Big Attendance.

There must be some good reason why the board has not asked for any legislation for four years. Here is its chance, through a recess committee, to lay the case before the public.

I hope all of you who have a valid reason why this committee should be appointed will crowd the hearing on this important measure this afternoon. This reform is going through anyway. The AMERICAN has enough faith in Massachusetts legislators to assist that. The hearing today will simply determine the methods to be employed.

The order as reported by the Committee on Public Health reads in part, as follows:

"The committee shall give public hearings, shall have power to subpoena oaths, require the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and documents.

"The committee shall report to the next General Court, not later than January 10, 1914, such bill or bills, drafts of proposed legislation, if any, as the committee may deem expedient. The committee may expend such sums for its necessary expenses, not exceeding $2,000."

Label Bill to Governor.

Both branches of the Legislature yesterday accepted the report of the conference committee on the bill prohibiting the false labelling or stamping of packages containing food. The Senate Conference Committee inserted the word "knowingly" to protect the seller.

The House Conference Committee, consisting of Representatives Wilson of Lynn, Hatlen of Medford, and Quinn of Cambridge, tried to prevent the insertion of the word. But rather than lose the entire bill, they reluctantly concurred with the Senate. The bill now goes to the Governor for his signature.

The Fitzgerald-Sullivan bill to safeguard the public health against unclean milk containers and appliances used in the treatment and mixing of milk become a law today. This is another bill backed by the AMERICAN in its pure food campaign.

Fighting Ninth on Annual Outing

Thirty veterans of the old "Fighting Ninth," who fought their way through shot and shell to fame and victory during the Civil War, joined with the present-day "Fighting Ninth," Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, today in an outing at the Point of Pines. The event was in celebration of the fifty-second anniversary of the veterans' enlistment.

The entire regiment, in full dress, headed by Colonel E. L. Logan, his staff and the regimental band, early today paraded the streets from the armory en route to the Atlantic avenue waterfront, embarking there by special steamer to the outing grounds.

Arraign Slayer of Brookline Man

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 11.—George Fiesla, captured after a cross-country chase in which scores of workmen participated, was arraigned in court today charged with stabbing Frank Regan, factory foreman of Brookline, Mass., to death, in a quarrel over a game of cards.

Team Hurts Suffragist.

WILTON, Ct., June 11.—Mrs. E. C. H. Schenck, prominent in woman suffrage, is suffering from a broken shoulder and internal injuries, the result of being run over by a team of horses she was driving.

NEW PLAN TO STUDY STATE'S HEALTH BOARD

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The Joint Committee on Rules will give a public hearing at the State House today after the adjournment of the Legislature, on an order to appoint a recess committee to investigate the spread of tuberculosis and the necessity of reorganizing the State Board of Health.

This order was unanimously reported by the Committee on Public Health. Representative Frank Mulvey of Fall River is in charge of the report.

I believe there is need of such a committee. The House recently voted against a reorganization of the State Board of Health by a margin of six votes. And I know this close margin is pretty positive proof there is a widespread demand the health board be reorganized.

A recess committee can offer the State board no offense. If the board is all it claims to be, it need not fear any investigation. One hundred and fourteen representatives voted in favor of a reorganization, and a roll call vote.

In fairness to them and the constituents they represent, the board can offer no valid excuse against the appointment of this committee. Here is a chance for the board to refute the charges made against it. Flood charges have up to date remained unanswered. Ordinary self-respect would demand that the board refute them.

The board has claimed that the blame for its failure to enforce health laws was because the Legislature would not give it proper power.

SHUN POLITICS, SAYS CARDINAL TO GIRL GRADS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 11.—Cardinal Gibbons told the graduates of the Immaculate Seminary at their commencement exercises here that women's place is in the home and that she has no place in politics. "The public conscience is sick," continued the cardinal, "but the public knows it. It is very quick to see and recognize moral delinquency. It is bad for a man to be sick, but if he does not know it the situation is worse. That has been the case of a large part of the Christian world for a long time.

WOMAN ELUDES POLICE; SUICIDE BENEATH TRAIN

Eluding thirty policemen who were guarding the tracks, an unidentified woman, extremely well dressed, threw herself beneath a train near the Porter Station in North Cambridge late last night and was found early today.

The woman had tried to kill herself at 10.30 last night. Station Agent Bernard McIntosh discovered her lying between the tracks. When she saw him she jumped up and escaped in the darkness. He notified the police, and a detail was at once sent to patrol the tracks to prevent a second attempt.

The woman has not been identified, although a card on her garments bore the name "A. M. Robinson," and the mark of a fashionable clothing shop on Tremont street. She was about fifty-five years old, with gray hair, and gold-filled teeth. She wore a fashionable straw hat with green trimmings, and a blue braided skirt. Over all she wore a long gray coat.

The police are mystified to know how she eluded them and reached the track. It is believed that she was killed by the 11.30 outbound train last night. Her body, cut in bits, was found under an overhead bridge there.

The police believe, either that she hid in the shadows under the bridge till the train came, or that she dropped from the foot passageway on the bridge, squarely under the wheels of the train.

At 10.30 last night, station Master Bernard McIntosh saw the woman come down the steps from the bridge and lie down squarely between the tracks. He climbed over the fence between the tracks and started toward her, but she jumped up and ran away.

Lieutenant Cox of Station 4, Cambridge, sent a detail of men to guard the tracks, but nothing was seen of her until her body was discovered at 2.25 today

JERE KNODE COOKE, the unfrocked rector, putting on the finger of Floretta Whaley, during their marriage this week by Justice of the Peace Tipper of Stamford, the ring he gave her six years ago when they eloped. "Never take it off again," was his injunction to her after their marriage.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Jere Knode Cooke, once the rector of Augustus Belmont's church, and Mrs. Floretta Whaley Cooke, once Floretta Whaley, a member of his church at Hempstead, L. I., began today the new life for which they had struggled, and fought, prayed and hoped for six years.

"No, I don't feel any different today," said Mrs. Cooke, who acquired that title Monday in Stamford, Ct., "because I have married. I have borne him two splendid boys. I have always felt that love and great harmony between two people was the rose of life.

"But I have always felt, too, that the roses of life needed a vase. Convention is that vase. Jere and I had the roses of life—had them in profusion, our garden held nothing but the most fragrant and loveliest roses—but now we have the vase. And having the vase we are now complete in the two essentials. Nevertheless, I regret nothing and would rather have the rose than the empty vase. But of course my highest happiness comes from having both."

AMERICAN WINS ANOTSER PURE FOOD VICTORY

The AMERICAN in its fight for better pure food laws won another important victory today with the announcement from Governor Foss that he had signed the Fitzgerald-Sullivan bill to safeguard the public health against unclean milk containers and appliances used in the mixing and treatment of milk. It now becomes law. The Governor signed the measure late last night. He had until midnight to act.

The bill was introduced on the petition of Mayor Fitzgerald. The fight for it was led by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester. The AMERICAN and Harry P. Cassidy have strenuously advocated the bill since its introduction, in the interest of the public health.

This is the eighth pure food bill backed by the AMERICAN to become a law this year to date. Two more measures are pending before the Governor and will probably be signed this week, these being a bill to prohibit the false labelling of receptacles containing food articles and a bill for recodification of the health laws of the State.

J. L. Johnson, a Cambridge food inspector, and Milk Inspector Jordan of Boston lent valuable assistance in the fight for the Fitzgerald-Sullivan bill, which, it is said, was introduced by the Mayor at inspector Jordan's suggestion. The new law reads:

Section 1. Vessels used as containers in the holding, handling or sale of milk to be sold, or intended for sale, shall be clean and free from foreign deposits upon the inside. Whoever, by himself or by his servant or agent, or as the servant or agent of another person, sells, exchanges or delivers, or has in his custody or possession with intent to sell, exchange or deliver milk in vessels used as containers unclean upon the inside or having foreign deposits upon the inside, shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars.

Section 2. All appliances, implements, utensils, strainers or materials used in the treatment or mixing of milk to be sold or intended for sale shall be clean and free from foreign deposits. Whoever by himself or by his servant or agent, or as the servant or agent of another person, sells, exchanges or delivers, or has in his custody or possession with intent to sell, exchange or deliver, milk treated or mixed by the use of appliances, implements, utensils, strainers or materials unclean or having foreign deposits shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars.

AUTOMOBILE MEN GIVE 1500 POOR AN OUTING

Fifteen hundred children, the orphaned, poor and crippled little ones of the city are today enjoying their annual outing at Nantasket Beach. It is the outing given each year to the children of the institutions of the city by Chester I. Campbell of automobile interests.

The children were taken to Nantasket in automobiles donated by the people of the city. They will have lunch at the Nantasket and will enjoy the freedom of the beach throughout the day. The merry-go-round has been chartered and is the busiest spot on the beach. Candy, ice cream, peanuts and bonanas will be supplied the children free.

The children come from the Peabody Home for Crippled Children, The Leopold Morse House, the Kindergarten for the Blind, The Perkins Institute, Gwynne Temporary Home, Home for Orphaned and Destitute Children and other charitable institutions in this city. Many children were also taken from various localities in the North, South and West Ends.

Urge Law to Stop Child Labor Evils

Prominent Legislators at Meeting of Rules Committe.

Prominent members of the Legislature were in the large gathering, including many women, who thronged Room 353 in the State House today to advocate the Sullivan order for a State-wide legislative investigation of child labor conditions. There was no opposition.

The hearing was before the House Rules Committee, which will report with a recommendation as to whether favorable action should be taken on the matter by the House. The order calls for the appointment of a committee of nine members of the House to sit during the recess and investigate the conditions under which women and children are employed in the various industries and occupations, with a view of determining what legislation is necessary to wipe out the evils of child labor. The committee is empowered to summons witnesses, administer oaths and require the production of books, papers and documents.

Repeat Brookline Fete for Children

So successful was the children's fete in aid of the North Bennet Street Industrial School of the North End last Saturday at Uplands, the Brookline estate of Moses Williams, that it will be repeated this afternoon.

Miss Elizabeth Vanston, Mrs. Hollis Burgess, Miss Gertrude Hazlewell, Miss Jennie Swartzman, Miss Dorothy Taylor and Miss Marion Clapp, Miss Inez Aspinwall, Miss Ruth Foster, Miss Mary Hennessey, Miss Alice DeFord, Miss Elizabeth DeFord, Miss Sally Davis and Miss Alice Bremer will help as before at the tables displaying the articles made by the children of the Industrial School. The proceeds will be devoted to the Summer camp of the school.

Urges Exile for Active Militants

AMHERST, June 11.—Professor Anson D. Morse told the Amherst Historical Society that the English suffragette movement has "now entered upon a stage of energy and recklessness and become a menace. It takes the form of terrorism, after the fashion of the Jacobins in the French Revolution." He said the remedy is to use patience and firmness and for Parliament to exile enemies of the State.

Poe's Cottage Moved.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The little white cottage on Kingsbridge Road, in the Bronx, where Edgar Allan Poe is supposed to have written "The Raven," has just been moved from its original site and placed on a new foundation prepared for it in Poe Park, at One Hundred and Ninety-fourth street and Valentine avenue.

Steamers Report Great Berg and Fog

Captain Edward Thomas of the Leyland liner Cestrian, which arrived in port today from London, reported that on Sunday he sighted an immense iceberg in latitude 43.02, longitude 47.30. The Wilson liner Marengo also arrived from Hull, England, reporting that for fully 1,700 miles in the north Atlantic she steamed through dense fogbanks and was delayed several days by them.

Conservatory Girls on Annual Picnic

Four hundred Conservatory of Music students went to Nantasket today for their annual picnic. Nantasketite say they never saw such a jollification-not even at the Harvard Senior picnic.

The girls took inches along; they ran races, had a dip in the surf played games, read, sewed, sang and fished. They went down on a barloe but early today.

Fishermen Report Dangers of Fog

Skippers of fishing vessels arriving at Boston today report that operations on the fishing grounds for several days have been rendered hazardous in the extreme by dense fogs, and many nets have strayed in their duties. The schooner Leonora Silviera, which arrived at T Wharf today, lost five men in the South Channel on George's Banks last week. All were later picked up.

HOW TO GET CREDIT

At Big Stores And Pay $1.00 a Week

THE lack of ready money no longer prevents the wise economical woman from taking advantage of the great money saving bargains of the Big Department and other high-class specialty stores—Before N. Sallinger arranged with the stores to take care of people who needed credit it was impossible for those without ready cash to avail themselves of the wonderful bargain buying privileges at the stores. Many people suffered a loss, because, before N. Sallinger made arrangements for them, they lost bargain opportunities that did not present themselves again when those people had the cash. Now thousands of women and men, too, (who never before bought on credit) are using N. Sallinger's order check to conveniently and economically supply their needs at their favorite stores.

NOTE An analysis of the "ORDER CHECK" system of credit purchasing shows the benefits and advantages to be clearly on the side of the purchaser who uses the Order Check.

"WHAT made you think I wanted to know anything about her?" he questioned.

"Oh, I can't exactly say, Garson replied carelessly, in an attempt to disarm/dr his agitation. "You were up to the house, you know. Don't you see?"

"I did want to see her, that's a fact," Burke admitted. He kept on with his writing, his head bent low. "But she wasn't at her flat. I guess she must have taken my advice, and skipped out. Clever girl, that!"

"I DIDN'T KILL HIM"

Garson contrived to present an aspect of comparative indifference.

"Yes," he agreed. "I was thinking of going West, myself," he ventured.

"Oh, were you?" Burke exclaimed; and, now, there was a new note in his voice. His hand slipped into the pocket where was the pistol, and clutched it. He stared at Garson fiercely, and spoke with a flash of the words:

"Why did you kill Eddie Griggs?"

"I didn't kill him!" The reply was quick enough, but it came weakly. Again Garson was forced to wet his lips with a dry tongue, and to swallow painfully. "I tell you, I didn't kill him!" he repeated at last, with more force.

Burke sneered his disbelief.

"You killed him last night—with this!" he cried, tiercely. On the instant, the pistol leaped into view, pointed straight at Garson. "Why? the inspector shouted. "Come on now! Why?"

"I didn't. I tell you!" Garson was growing stronger since at last the crisis was upon him. He got to his feet with the swiftness of movement and sprang close to the desk. He bent his head forward challengingly to meet the glare of his accuser's eyes. There was no flinching in his own steel glare. His nerves had ceased their jangling under the tautening of necessity.

"You did." Burke reiterated. He put his whole will into the assertion of guilt, to batter down the man's resistance.

"You did, I tell you! You did!"

Garson leaned still further forward, until his face was almost level with the inspector's. His eyes were unclouded now, were blazing. His voice came resolute in its denial. The entire pose of him was intrepid, dauntless.

"And I tell you I didn't!"

There passed many seconds, while the two men battled in silence, will warring against will. In the end it was the murderer who triumphed.

MARY MENTIONED

Suddenly Burke dropped the pistol into his pocket and lolled back in his chair. His gaze fell away from the man confronting him. In the same instant the rigidness of Garson's form relaxed and he straightened slowly. A tide of secret joy swept through him as he realized his victory. But his outward expression remained unchanged.

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably. "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amiable as he went on speaking.

"You see, don anyhow, we've got the right party safe enough. You can bet on that!"

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively; and returned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll go along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke protested, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer. At the agreed signal to Cassidy, "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

GARSON BLUNDERS

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back on him with appalling force. Of what avail was safety if she were still in peril?

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, no, I do too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and they said she'd gone to bed—headache, I guess.

Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house, all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Gilder?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came nearer the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, of whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson with difficulty suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the centre of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and when it opened again, and Dick Gilder appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

THE CONFESSION

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, on blade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—a catchall.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came lolkably into the office. By some magic of duty, he had contrived to give his usually phlegmatic features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say," Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they're squealin'!"

Burke regarded his aide with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Gilder. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency; and, now, his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right, then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice boomed somberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke on the Inspector's word with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a blare. "That's a damned lie! . . . I did it!"

JOE GARSON had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no need to bis own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some day, he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even, had he been innocent, and she guilty of the crime, he would still have taken the burden of it on his own shoulders. He had saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, so far as the power in him might be. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, at the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to the society on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest kind, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one gallantness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary, which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here all deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her.

Try Teacher Absent to Bear a Child

Attorney Declares Charge Against Her Is Race-Suicidal.

NEW YORK, June 11.—At the trial of Mrs. M. F. Petrello, teacher in public School No. 14, before the school committee, D. J. Talley, her counsel, insisted on putting into the record this charge made against her while she was in the hospital:

Neglect of duty and absence without leave to bear a child.

"The child-bearing clause has now been dropped, but it is the real issue here," Talley declared. "Upon your decision depends whether school teachers shall become hypocrites or liars, and commit race suicide."

'Crime Due to Unfit Work,' Says Pelletier

Canal's Defence to Be Finest in World

Most Powerful Guns and Fortifications Prepared for Panama.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The fortifications for offence and defence at the Panama Canal will be the most powerful in the world.

The defence will consist of ten fourteen-inch guns, one sixteen-inch gun and twenty-eight twelve-inch mortars.

It is proposed to divide the armament so that six of the fourteen-inch guns and the sixteen-inch gun now at Sandy Hook shall be placed at the Pacific terminus of the canal with sixteen twelve-inch mortars.

The other mortars and fourteen-inch guns are to be taken to the Atlantic side of the canal. The harbor on the Pacific side has been mined and the seas for miles outside has been mapped for the effectiveness of the mortars.

Port Board Seek Eastern Terminal

The directors of the port of Boston have requested the Attorney-General to prepare the necessary papers to enable them to take by eminent domain the Eastern Railroad property at East Boston.

This property adjoins the terminus of the Cunard and Leyland lines. The port directors have been in conference with the various railroads for some time with a view of making this a union terminal for railroads on the East Boston side of the harbor similar to the new Commonwealth Pier on the South Boston side.

The property contains 450,000 square feet and fronts on the thirty-five-foot main ship channel. The port directors propose to construct a modern 1,000-foot terminal.

KAISER SEES JAPS' MASTERY OF THE PACIFIC

BERLIN, June 11.—That the idea of a closer understanding between Germany and Japan, first hinted at in the revelations of Dr. Karl Graves, the former confidential agent for Germany and England, to the AMERICAN, has been receiving the thoughtful attention of German publicists is shown again in an article in this week's Die Zeitschrift by Count Reventlow, the foremost naval expert in Germany.

"Suppose Japan really become master of the Pacific Ocean?" he says. "It is scarcely likely Germany's economic interest would suffer thereby. Equally little could it be injured by a partial weakening of American influence in foreign affairs.

"Great Britain would be forced to transfer its attention to the Far East as the chief centre of its interests. This also would be scarcely likely to injure Germany's interests.

"On the other hand, what does it matter to the German empire if the yellow races establish themselves on the American continent? Even the wildest fancy cannot perceive a menace to German interests in this.

"Taking all these considerations into account in connection with Germany's political situation it appears, on the contrary, that Germany and Japan would have every reason to come to an understanding.

"The mere fact of such an understanding would have extraordinary influence on the international situation.

"This influence would be favorable to Germany and Japan and in proportion as grounds for a Japanese-American conflict broaden just so much more urgent becomes the necessity for Germany ignoring race considerations and holding herself free to act according to the dictates of her own interests."

NEW YORK, June 11.—Documentary evidence of the relations between Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves and the British government was put into the possession of the AMERICAN today.

These documents consist of verbatim copies of cable messages exchanged between Dr. Graves and the famous "Buzzing" with whom he dealt in the British intelligence department.

'U. S. at Mercy of Powers,' Says Depew

"Our Army Only a Skeleton and Naval Policy Suicidal."

NEW YORK, June 11.—Chauncey M. Depew, sailing for Europe, declared the United States was at the mercy of any power that cared to attack her. He said our army was only a skeleton and our one battleship a navy policy naval suicide. "If we had trouble with Japan or some other power we would be licked out of our shoes at first."

FOXHALL KEENE WRITES THRILLING STORY OF GREAT POLO VICTORY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

LEDOUX OUTCLASSES M'GOVERN, BUT IS ONLY GIVEN DRAW.

KEENE'S STORY OF AMERICA'S POLO VICTORY

Upsetting all expert calculations, America's "big four," short enders in the betting, vanquished the challenging English team in the first game of the international cup series at Meadowbrook field yesterday. The score was 5½ to 3 goals. The gross score was 7 to 3, but one and one-half goals were deducted from the American tally for fouling.

By FOXHALL KEENE.
(America's Greatest Polo Player).

NEW YORK, June 11.—It was a glorious match. Everyone in this country is delighted, I am sure. No end of praise is due our plucky team. This formidable aggregation played right up to its best form most of the time and certainly deserved victory.

Monte Waterbury Injured.

The brilliant victory should be all the more cherished when one considers that No. 2, Monte Waterbury, broke his finger during the contest. A new man, L. B. Stoddard, now, I mean, to the famous combination, had to be called upon. He acquitted himself well—very, very well.

The much heralded team play of the Englishmen was not there. In fact, as an organization the challengers are far less formidable than we had been led to suppose. Most of the time—anyway in the early periods of the match—they seemed to be no bread or fall to their play. One had to dig around to find out who was playing numbers 1, 2, 3 or back. The play of the invaders, however, improved in that respect later on in the game.

Our team jumped right in with a vim that was simply irresistible. Larry Waterbury at No. 1 proved of the very greatest service to his team by his wonderfully quick and aggressive tactics. Moreover, he always hit the ball well when his time came. Devereux Milburn was a host in himself. He was all over the place, and did no end of good for the team.

Whitney Plays Star Game.

Both Mr. Whitney and Monte Waterbury played exceptionally nice polo, and should be well satisfied with themselves, as the rest have a right to be.

The English ponies were grand to look at—better than our own, I thought. They seemed to go faster, but were a little more difficult to manoeuvre. No man can pull and haul at a pony and play his best game. Our ponies seemed quicker to turn and twist about, and allowed our players to be very much more busy than the other side.

Such a few fouls were committed, as was clean all the way. Both of the many unexcelled misses when pierced no reason in the world.

Elimination of Monte Waterbury, for us looks very serious for our side. It will break up the fine combination famous four had effected as a unit of playing together for over a year. Who will be put in as remaining games I do not know.

Ritson Star for English.

It would be difficult to say which of the Englishmen played the best. I should say Ritson all through the match. Cheapnor seemed up in place. Edwards did not play in anything like the form he displayed here two years ago. Hilson was strong all the way and Lockett about as well as I anticipated he would be.

I should expect the Englishmen, after yesterday's match, to come out much stronger on Saturday. They should be much better, I think, and their ponies also. Yesterday's game was the first real battle they had had since they arrived in this country. And yet again they lack our quickness of action and ability to hit easily while going at great speed.

Undoubtedly the team that England sent here two years ago was superior in the field to the one which appeared for Great Britain at Meadowbrook yesterday afternoon. The combination of 1911 played very well together, and the ponies exceedingly so. This year the ponies appear here the Englishmen to end of trouble in pulling up and manoeuvring.

In such a short series as that which decides possession of the polo cup, victory in the first game means a decided advantage. But we must realize that the great fight is before us. The injury to Monte Waterbury is deplorable, but not necessarily fatal to our chances.

Praises Yankee Players.

America proved its pluck in the face of many disappointing obstacles. Too much praise cannot be given to the men who repulsed the first attack of the Britons. They jumped into the breach at the very last moment and acquitted themselves in a fashion that was an honor to the country.

Personally I feel very disappointed in having injured myself at the last moment. I should have been pleased to meet the Englishmen though I realize that my presence could scarce have made our triumph more impressive.

I am so delighted with yesterday's brilliant victory as it is possible for a polo player to be who is forced to watch the battle from the standpoint of a non-combatant. And I am sure that every patriotic American feels as proud of our team as I do myself.

Good luck to our cause Saturday afternoon.

BERMUDA, June 11.—The Barbara II. today won the Philadelphia to Bermuda motor boat race, crossing the finish line at 2:59 minutes and 29 seconds after 3 o'clock. She encountered northeast winds all the way. It took the Barbara II. 85 hours and 55 minutes to make the 734 miles between Philadelphia and Bermuda. The boats started in the race leaving Philadelphia at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. Besides the Barbara II. were the Dream, winner of last year's race, and the Tosca II. The Gordon Bennett trophy and a prize of $1,000 goes to the winner.

Alberts-Ritchie in Gloucester Bout

The boxing show, which was scheduled to be held in Gloucester on next Monday night, has been moved forward to Friday evening. George Alger was originally scheduled to meet Kid Alberts in the main bout, but Alger will be unable to box and Joe Ritchie has been secured to take his place. This bout is billed for twelve rounds.

Patsy DeLisco and Rhoddy McDonald will clash in the semi-final contest of ten rounds. "Kid" Lee will meet "Young" Ketchell in one of the six-round preliminaries, while Tommy McFarland will entertain "Young" Morley in the other preliminary "go."

Pitcher Moseley to Join the Red Sox

Earle Moseley has been purchased from the Youngstown team by the Red Sox and will report at once. Moseley was with the Red Sox during the training season at Hot Springs, but was turned back just before the team started North. Since his return to Youngstown Moseley has twirled great ball, and as the Red Sox pitchers have not been delivering to the entire satisfaction of the local magnates it was agreed to recall the recruit. He pitched a no-hit, no-run game Sunday and would have twirled a no-man-reach-first-base contest if it had not been for an error made by one of his team mates.

Swett New Andover Baseball Captain

ANDOVER, June 11.—Fred S. Swett of Mansfield, Mass., who has pitched for the last two years for Phillips-Andover Academy, has been elected captain of that nine for next year. He is eighteen years of age, is 5 feet 11½ inches tall and weighs 175 pounds.

RUNYON VIEWS POLO VICTORY

'BIG FOUR' DO THE UNEXPECTED

By DAMON RUNYON.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Riding "hell-for-leather," like cow punchers on a tear, the "Big Four" of American polo—Harry Payne Whitney, Devereaux Milburn and the Waterbury boys, "Larry" and "Monte"—trampled the English lads at Meadow Brook field yesterday afternoon and won the first skirmish of the battle for the international polo trophy by a score of 5½ to 3.

It was the old story of the forlorn hope that carried through.

Figured as certain losers even before they pushed their feet in the stirrups; outsiders in the betting; "outponied" and out-everything-ed that went to make up the advance "dope" of the experts, these Yankee cossacks of the club and collion went momentarily mad and battered to bits all preconceived notions of the game of polo.

A winning echo was still mocking the sound of the referee's whistle starting the contest, and the thirty thousand people gathered in the great stands which flanked the green field had not time to settle back in their seats when the American team began bending their ponies in a wild charge upon the English goal.

Gain Three Goals Quickly.

In one minute and thirty seconds these men, who only a few days ago were pronounced inadequate to defend the polo trophy in the name of America, had scored upon the invaders, and then they followed this up by hurling attack after attack against the British until in a trifle over six minutes they had piled up three valuable points.

It was that fierce opening smash which dropped the Union Jack.

Later in the afternoon the English four—flower of King George's wide-flung army—closed in and desperately slashed their way through American fortifications for three goals, but they never quite entirely recovered from their bewilderment over the first bitter rush, and they were always fighting at a disadvantage.

In one mad jam during the sixth period, "Monty" Waterbury, No. 2 man of the American four, fell back with a broken finger. His place was taken by Louis E. Stoddard, one of the men picked to play this game as a regular when the "Big Four" was suddenly disbanded aside last week, only to be called on again when Foxhall Keene, captain of the new line, fell in practice with a shattered collar bone.

The American force showed no loss of strength when the substitution was made. At one time during the game the Englishmen crept up to within a point and a half of the Yankees, aided by penalties against the trophy defenders. But in the closing minutes of play, as twilight was dimming the broad field, and the stands were hurriedly emptying, the Americans made one final, irresistible dash against the foreign goal and added to their score.

The general run of people probably know little or nothing about polo. Many of the 30,000 who saw the game yesterday were doubtless taking their first look at the millionaires' sport of "whizzy on horseback."

Fight to Stir Blood.

It was a fight to stir the most stagnant blood, and when the American four began that sudden and unexpected onslaught at the beginning of the game, it was indeed a thrilling and class individual who could restrain a yell of exultation.

And then, when "Monty" Waterbury first sent the ball hopping between the goal posts of the Englishmen like a white marble skipping over a green bowl, the multicost multi-millionaire in the club stand bellowed as vociferously as the overalled "wops" over in front of the American nibbles.

Somehow the Englishmen LOOKED as if they would win as they took the field. They were lean, drawn, and, apparently, most efficient men as they galloped briskly along over what seemed miles and miles and miles of green velour matting, on their wiry, nimble-footed ponies, whereas there seemed a lack of fire, and a comparative stodginess in our Americans as they rode in aboard loggy, stilted-looking horses that suggested heavy-headedness.

But it seems that looks are almost as deceptive as advance "dope" on the game of polo.

When the whistle sounded it immediately became apparent that the Americans had most of the fire, while the Englishmen were mostly fuel. A strange and startlingly reversible game, this polo, but for sheer excitement and international presentation of same has just a little something on any other line of sport conceived by mortal mah.

"Big Four" Lift Cup.

The American squad, as it lined up yesterday, was the same that brought the Westchester Polo Club trophy home from England in 1909 after the Britons had held it for twenty-three years, and it was the same squad that successfully resisted the efforts of the English to lift the trophy in 1911.

Moreover, it was identically the same squad that the authorities in charge of this contest decided to supplant last week by Foxhall Keene, L. E. Stoddard and Malcolm Stevenson, retaining only Devereux Milburn of the original four. Milburn was one of the heroes of yesterday. And even Milburn was to have been in a changed position.

Harry Payne Whitney, the man who has spent all of half a million dollars bringing home and defending the coveted trophy, gracefully retired from the field when the powers of American polo, whoever and whatever they may be, decided that he and the whole fighting line of which he was a part was too weak for the job in hand. He turned his captaincy over to Foxhall Keene, and but for the injury of the latter, Foxhall Keene would have been riding in Whitney's saddle yesterday.

Yet Whitney, too, like Milburn, was one of the stars of the afternoon, and in the hushes of the great crowd you could hear his voice talking, urging, cursing his men, while he mailed slashed with greater force and effect than his.

As for the Waterbury boys—"Larry" and "Monty"—you have only to read through the technical account of the play to see how they moved, and fought through the long afternoon.

A word for the Englishmen. Game fellows these captains from across the sea—Cheape, Edwards, Ritson and Lockett, with front names suggestive of shires and landed estates. They were defeated, but not disgraced.

The thirty thousand were slow in assembling, but when they finally got together it was such a crowd as has probably never before been seen in America. It is idle to speculate on the wealth represented by the people who sat in the stands.

There were women there who wore around their necks the pearled price of a kingdom—a small kingdom, perhaps, but none the less a kingdom—and who carried dangling from their fingertips the equivalent of enough money to board, and also room a dozen families for a year.

There were men there who can make Wall Street lie down, roll over, and beg for bread and butter—or at least who think they can—which amounts to about the same thing; yet their seats in the stands were on the same plane, and perhaps just as hard as your own.

The Meadow Brook polo field is pitched on the finest part of Long Island's level, and excessively green Hempstead Plains. Take an empty cigar box, rip out the ends and top of the top, paint the bottom green, and then set it out on your lawn. That will give you a vague idea—in fact, a very vague idea—of the situation out Meadow Brook way. The field itself is the cigar box, and the stands on the east and west sides of the field, but there is no cigar-box way to convey to you the spectacle of those stands covered with the social glory of the land.

Names like Paquin, and Worth, and Tiffany, dost hastily through the mind, faint echoes of magazine stories by Robert W. Chambers, et al, as the memory of that crowd returns; furthermore there are ideas struggling feebly for expression that glittering jewels, and gorgeous gowns, and beautiful women should all have no small part in this narration.

An Impressive Spectacle.

Along the tops of each stand were files of huge flags, the Stars and Stripes being alternated with the flag that the other side upon. The colors of the two nations were also fairwise across the lower part of the stands.

At 4 o'clock there was a parade of all the polo ponies, the English horses coming first, led by red-jacketed grooms, and the American mounts coming along later with blue-shirted hostlers at their heads. This first interested the crowd mildly. At 4:25 a fish-looking aeroplane popped in out of the southern sky and went buzzing over the field like a huge bee. This caused a during the game and hovered over the Captain Edwards was too fine player to appear, and the crowd gave him a warm greeting as he galloped out, slapping the ball ahead of him. Captain Ritson came next. Devereaux Milburn was the first American to show.

The Englishmen wore dark blue jackets and hats with dark blue bands. They kept their hats on their heads by means of strings under their chins. The Americans wore white shirts and white cork, cap-shaped helmets. The players on both sides wore the regulation and conventional, not to say necessary, white trousers and tan riding boots.

The Englishmen were easily distinguishable in action by numbers on their saddle blankets, but the Americans never looked this little feature, which is further proof that they do some things better in England than we do here, but not polo.

Cheape and Milburn foregathered in front of the south goal, their horses nose to nose; while the others were warming up. And gossiped. Then came Referee Strawbridge, mounted on a quiet bay and sporting a crushed hat and a carelessness coat, his appearance being the signal for the players to canter to the centre of the field and clear for action.

The whistle sounded at 4:42, and an instant later Milburn was ripping the ball down the field toward the south goal, which the Englishmen were then defending.

"Monty" Waterbury Establishes Time Record for Scoring Goal

J. M. "Monty" Waterbury scored the sixth goal of the international polo match yesterday in 31 seconds, and this makes a new goal-hitting record for the contest. This remarkable hit came off in the third period, in which it was the only one tallied. Soon after the ball being put in play there was a scrimmage, and out of it came the ball toward Waterbury.

Swinging his stick over his head, he brought it down on the willow root and it went plumb between the goal posts. The shortest previous record for goal-hitting stood to the credit of Foxhall P. Keene, and it took place as far back as 1886, when England defeated America at Newport. On that occasion Keene hit the first goal in 40 seconds.

Baseball Fan Dies Defending Hal Chase

CHICAGO, June 11.—Fred J. Porter fell dead tonight while in the midst of a heated argument with baseball fans over the ousting of Hal Chase by the Yankees to the White Sox.

Hemun Schweitzer and J. B. Willett told Porter that Manager Callahan of the Sox had made a bad trade. Chase, they said, was the Yankees' "hoodoo," and the Sox would land in the "cellar" before the season was over. Porter grew excited in his defense of Chase. He staggered to a chair and then fell to the floor. He was dead when a physician arrived.

HARVARD COACH GIVES OARSMEN HARD PRACTICE

BELMONT, Ct., June 11.—Although yesterday was raw and cold the Harvard crews spent the day to good advantage, getting good workouts both morning and afternoon. In the morning Coach Wray was assisted by Robert F. Herrick of Boston, he being an old Harvard stroke in the early 90's.

Wray gave Mr. Herrick the four-oar crews, which he took down stream and sent them through several racing starts and bursts, while Coach Wray had the eights up stream putting them through the same stunts. Several short races were tried by the crews, neither having any special advantage.

Freshmen Show Up Well.

In the afternoon Coach Wray paid most attention to the four-oar crews, taking them upstream. He tried several racing starts and coached the men on individual faults, practically eliminating the most marked. He tried several races and for the final sent the three fours for a quarter of a mile against the wind and tide.

The freshmen got the jump and were nearly a length ahead at the start, but the varsity crews, rowing steady, soon was on even terms and at the finish the varsity four was ahead by a scant yard, the other crews being even.

A grand fire early yesterday afternoon created some excitement and for a time some worry. The fire, which was probably set by a passing tramp, was on the bank near the portables, which houses the varsity crew. A bucket brigade was formed by the managers and the fire was soon under control.

Abeles Back in Boat.

Robert F. Herrick took several members of the crew down the river for a sail on his launch Gipsy. They returned in time for luncheon.

Captain Abeles, who was cut of the boat temporarily on account of a cold, was back in his seat fully recovered.

Kilbane Knocks Out Fox in the Sixth

RED SOX AFTER THIRD GAME

WOOD TO FACE CLEVELAND

The Red Sox will try and make it three straight wins over the Cleveland Naps in the final game of their series today.

Stahl will probably use Joe Wood on the mound today, and Sir Joseph, who looks more like the old Speed King every day, will undoubtedly put forth a mighty effort to tack another victory to the one he garnered from the White Sox and thus

It's running start for a mark that will put him up again with the top notchers.

Once more the Red Sox gave evidence of having returned to their championship form yesterday, and by the way that they went after Vean Gregg, their one-time boodoo, warmed the hearts of the "fans" who have been hoping against hope that the leaders would come back. The great Cleveland southpaw lasted but part of the inning, but in his brief stay on the mound his curves were bit harder by the Red Sox than they usually are in a full game of ball

Collins Pitches Good Game.

When the elongated Vean had taken to the tall timbers Steen and Standing successively took up the hurling and just to show that there was no partiality, the Stahls gathered one run off each of these twirlers.

Another fact signalized the contest. It was the return of Ray Collins to pitching form. Ray was hammered good and hard, but he went on calmly and when situations grew tense was invariably there with a strike out or some similar kind of a life saver. His control, as usual, was perfect.

The Stahl Selders, likewise, were on the job all the time, and the work of the infield yesterday was of the best, showing life and fight. Steve Yerkes pulled off a couple of gilt edged stunts, his bare hand spear of Chapman's liner in the first inning, after Johnston had tripled, which cut off a hit and turned back a run, was the play that put the quietus on a very threatening Nap outburst, and took the fire out of the invaders.

Lajoie Star in Field.

Heinie Wagner and Gardner were likewise present with the spanked stuff and Engle played the steady, clean game that has become second nature with him.

Nap Lajoie's return to the paths was the feature of the Naps day, but though the Frenchman fielded his position in his own inimitable style, he was unable to come through with the willow, though he came to the pan on several occasions when a blow meant runs.

Hooper in Queer Assist.

Harry Hooper worked in an unusual assist in the seventh inning. Liebold, running for Carisch, was on second and Turner on first, when Johnston uncorked a safety to right. Liebold headed for home and Hooper threw the ball to Yerkes at second base. Seeing this, the runner slowed up a bit and was more or less surprised when Steve shot the sphere with a strike out or some similar kind of a

Yesterday was Jimmy McAleer's forty-fourth birthday and the Sox naturally felt inclined to turn in a win.

Heinie Wagner made a regular star play when he speared Ryan's smash in the eighth inning with his gloved hand and cut down Olson at third. The play put the damper on the last ditch Nap assault.

The Athletics experienced little difficulty yesterday in defeating the Browns and thereby annexing their fifteenth straight victory.

ST. LOUIS, June 12—The Boston Pilgrims and the Cardinals will wind up their series here today. The local team has won two of the three games which have been played and the Bostons will try hard to get an even break by winning today's contest.

After their game here today, Stallings' crew will go to Cincinnati, where they will battle with Joe Tinker's band of Reds.

The game here yesterday between the Pilgrims and Cardinals, which was won by the local team in eleven innings by the score of 5 to 7, was a huge joke. The pitchers of both clubs performed like minor leaguers and their offerings were hammered to all of the corners of the ball park.

The Bostons got an early lead, but Hess went to pieces in the middle of the game and was forced to give way to James, who pitched only fair ball. Hodson later relieved James, but failed to star.

There was a steady procession of St. Louis pitchers between the bench and the mound, four hurlers in all being used by Huggins.

The victory of the Athletics and the defeat of the Naps yesterday gave the Quakertown players a lead of four full games, or 93 points, over the Naps.

Joe Jackson of the Naps got three hits, out of four times up yesterday and made a big gain over Ty Cobb of the Tigers batting total now with Dubuc doing those efforts. Walter Johnson's shuts and shouts.

The Senators got only one hit off the combined hurling efforts of Cicotte and House yesterday, but won the 10 inning game from the Tigers, who were shut out with two hits by Walter Johnson.

Manager Fred Clarke of the Pirates, batting to a punch in the ninth, delivered a two bagger and paved the way for a 5 to 4 victory for his team over the Dodgers.

The Cubs tied up the score in the ninth yesterday and then won out in the tenth in their game with the Giants.

The Phillies came from behind in the ninth yesterday, batted out two runs and scored another victory over the hapless Reds.

"Big Ed" Konetchy, the star first sacker of the Cardinals, poled out two singles, a triple and a homer out of six times up yesterday. Magee the Cardinal left fielder, got four singles.

Thirty-two players, including eight pitchers and four catchers, took part in the Cardinal-Pilgrims game yesterday, which lasted just three hours.

WORLD'S BEST MILERS ENTER GOTHAM RACE

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

What promises to be one of the best mile races seen on this side this season is scheduled to take place Sunday afternoon at Celtic Park, New York, when Meredith, Kiviat, Holland, Powers and a host of other prominent athletes will start in the Manhattan. This is an annual event and has been won by different athletes connected with New York clubs for several years.

Kiviat has been retained a winner once before. The most interesting thing about this race is that for the first time in his athletic career Ted Meredith, holder of the world's half mile record, will start in a mile race. Meredith has shown form that would indicate that he should do close to 4m 20s for the distance or even better.

Has Beat Kiviat Twice.

He has been returned a winner once this year over Kiviat. He has also competed in against Kiviat was three quarters of a mile. He covered the full distance in 3m 3s. Such a phenomenal performance for any distance that has been training faithfully for the 880 yards and this race will determine his condition.

Holland and Powers, both members of the Boston A. A. are entering contended. They have shown that they can cover the mile route in 4m 20s. Holland has been matched with doing 4m 18s for the distance, but as he is in fine form and has been entering the

Their Married Life

Warren Admits That a Man Cannot Dissipate and Succeed in Business Now-a-Days.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WHEN they sat down to the table with its glittering appointments of silver and cut glass Helen saw that it was to be a long and formal dinner.

At each plate were four wine glasses and five forks—a most formidable array. Helen took a quick inventory of the forks, for fear she might make the inexcusable blunder of using the wrong one.

It was the first time they had dined with the Thurstons, and Helen was rather disconcerted by the elaborate pretentiousness of it all. She would have enjoyed and felt much more at ease at a simpler dinner.

Mrs. Thurston in her violet evening gown made a most charming hostess, but there was a worried, anxious look about her eyes.

Helen wondered what could have gone wrong. And then as she saw her glance unseenly toward her husband she divined the trouble. Mr. Thurston was unmistakably flushed and loquacious. It was plain that he had had several drinks before dinner. And with all these glasses before him—Helen could well understand his wife's anxiety.

"What do you think of this sherry, Curtis?" demanded Mr. Thurston, when the maid had removed the cocktail glasses and poured out the pale amber wine. "Got a dozen of the real stuff this Winter when Goddard's wine cellar was auctioned off. Was lucky enough to get some rattling old claret, too."

Warren pulled the sherry, and Mr. Thurston insisted on having the glasses refilled. With the next course the claret was served.

"Hold on there, Marie," ordered Mr. Thurston, as the maid placed on the sideboard the napkin-wrapped bottle, "let's see that date. There," showing the time-stained label, "1870—how about that? Ought to be pretty good, oughtn't it?"

"Henry is so fretful about its wines," laughed Mrs. Thurston nervously apologetic. "I really can't see that this very old claret has so much better flavor than any other."

"That's because you don't know anything about claret, my dear," declared Mr. Thurston as he drained his glass.

As the dinner progressed Helen noticed that Mrs. Thurston was watching her husband more and more anxiously. He was drinking much more than was good for him. After the claret had come the champagne, of which he had already imbibed two glasses. As Warren drank very moderately, it made his condition the more marked.

Mrs. Thurston, who had been toying nervously with her almost untouched glass, now motioned to the maid, and Helen heard her whisper:

"Marie, don't fill Mr. Thurston's glass again."

It was a humiliating order to give and she flushed painfully, for she knew they had overheard it, or divined the whispered instruction.

A few moments later Mr. Thurston motioned to Marie to empty glass. However, Marie, who was now serving the salad, pretended not to see him, and as he was in the midst of telling a story, Helen hoped he might forget about the wine. But when he raised his glass and found it still empty, he again motioned the maid, who was carefully avoiding his glance.

"Marie, some wine here. Fill the other glasses, too."

There was a murmur of protest from the all.

"What's the matter? None of you drinking anything? What's wrong with you, Curtis?"

"I've got to go light, old man, answered Warren. "I've a big day's work tomorrow."

A FOOLISH MAN

"Oh, never let business interfere with pleasure," and Mr. Thurston laughed boisterously at this time-worn adage. Then as he still failed to get the attention of the maid, he said peremptorily:

"Marie!" tapping his glass sharply.

It was an embarrassing moment. In the face of Mrs. Thurston's order not to fill it, Helen wondered what the girl would do.

"The bottle's empty, sir," faltered the maid.

"Then open another bottle," ordered Mr. Thurston.

"They," ventured Mrs. Thurston nervously. "We're going to have a cordial soon. Do you care for any more champagne?"

"Oh, all right, bring on the cordial, then. What sound girl drove in Ford Rice," he explained, when the maid brought on a curiously shaped bottle with a bright foreign label. "You can put that right here," as, having filled the tiny cordial glasses, she started to take away the bottle.

It was time to leave the man to their coffee and cigars, but Mrs. Thurston dreaded to leave her husband drinking.

"Have another cordial, Curtis. It's very light. Won't hurt you."

"No, thank you, I've had enough."

"Mr. Curtis is right, dear, I think we've all had enough."

Now, see here, Minnie, don't be a killjoy," grumbled her husband.

"But you know, dear, you'll feel badly tomorrow, and that cordial is so sweet and heavy. Don't drink any more of it, Henry."

"All right; this sweet stuff is a bit sickening," he agreed good-naturedly. "Let's have a Scotch. What d'you say, Curtis?"

Rising somewhat unsteadily, Mr. Thurston got a bottle of Scotch from the sideboard, which he brought over to the table.

"Let's leave that till later," as Warren, to Mrs. Thurston's relief, made to move to leave the table. "Shall we all go in the other room? We can smoke in there, can't we, Mrs. Thurston?"

"Oh, you can smoke anywhere," she answered gratefully.

A BAD SCENE.

As they trailed out of the dining room, a fold of Helen's chiffon gown caught on a carved claw foot of the sideboard.

"Allow me." Mr. Thurston stooped over to unfasten it. He was unsteady, his foot slipped on the polished floor, he lurched and fell heavily. Trying to catch himself by the sideboard, he knocked over a cut glass vinegar cruet, which broke and splashed over Helen's dress.

With Warren's help he scrambled up, dignifiedly to his feet, stammering a confused apology. Mrs. Thurston, crimson with embarrassment, had caught up some napkins and was wiping Helen's dress.

"Come to the bathroom—quick! I'll wash it out before it stains."

"It doesn't matter—please don't worry about it," protested Helen.

"Something like this always happens," sobbed Mrs. Thurston, as she crouchingly sponged the spots in the bathroom. "That's why we so rarely have dinner parties. He always drinks too much and does something to embarrass me. Oh, you don't KNOW!" now sobbing hysterically.

"Oh, don't—don't, they'll hear you," pleaded Helen.

"I can't help it!" recklessly. "And he's getting worse! He used to drink only a little—now he's more and more. It's growing on him and I don't know what to do. But in every other way with a sort of fierce pride, "he's the kindest and best husband in the world."

"But why do you have wine at dinners, then?" asked Helen gently.

"Oh, he insists on it. You don't think I'd have it, if he didn't?"

"Oh, no—no, he wants them all. It's the only thing he's obstinate about. And each time he promises he'll drink only a little. But you see how it is."

Helen had never been more sorry for Mrs. Thurston. She had always thought her rather cold. But now her reserve was explained. She talked for several moments before Helen could calm her.

When they finally went back to the drawing room, they found that Mr. Thurston had brought in the Scotch and vichy, had mixed a highball for himself, and was trying to persuade Warren to have one.

"How about bridge?" asked Warren briskly.

As Thurston was inordinately fond of bridge, they managed to keep him from drinking during the game.

"Well, he's hitting it up hard, all right," shrugged Warren contemptuously on their way home. "Made a fool of himself tonight."

"Oh, Warren, I feel so sorry for Mrs. Thurston. She simply broke down—she says he's drinking more and more."

"Then why does she serve all that stuff at dinner?"

"Yes, I asked her that, but she says if she doesn't let him have it there, he'll take it outside."

"Huh, he does that anyway. I see him at luncheon at the Lawyers' Club drinking an almost."

Helen gave a gasp of dismay. "Oh, won't that affect his business?"

"Won't have much business to affect soon. Can't bounce during office hours and hold your clients these days."

"Oh, dear, with a sigh of contempt. "I'm so glad you realize that. I read an article the other day about how the business man was becoming the temperance man."

"Temperance!" with a snort. "The business man don't care a hang about temperance! What he wants is success, and he can't get it if he drinks. The day's past when you could do business and boose at the same time. Now, you've got to have a clear head and be on the job every minute—that's why men drink less. Oh, I know the temperance boys spout a lot about their influence and all that. But take it from me, it's not temperance—it's ordinary horse sense."

How to Destroy the Dandruff Germ

BY A SPECIALIST.

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that this germ is directly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are, therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist claims he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair-producing germ—if sufficient vitality and nutrition can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you: 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composition, one half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing half an hour it is ready to use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger-tips. If you wish it perfumed, add half a teaspoonful of Bergamot or Lavender, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. While this preparation is not a dye, it is unexcelled for restoring gray hair to its original color.

DRUGGISTS have been called upon so frequently to mix a hair tonic according to the famous formula since mentioned that druggists both in America and Europe are now having it compounded at laboratories in New York, London and Paris and sell it ready for immediate use under the name of LAVONA COMPOUND. Sold on the Satisfaction-Guaranteed-or-Money-Back plan.

Had Serious Lung Trouble—Now Well

It is surprising that there exists such skepticism as to the possibility of a person recovering from severe Lung Trouble when there are so many reports of complete recoveries brought about through the use of Viking, Nature's Alterative. This is a remedy for the throat and lungs which should be investigated by every sufferer. Read of this case:

1610 Susquehanna Ave., Phila., Pa.

"My Dear Sir: For two years I was afflicted with bronchitis of the lungs, and in February of 1902 I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia. When I recovered sufficiently to walk about the house I was left with a hard, racking cough, which kept me from my work and I could not eliminate. It was at this time, March 1902, that I began taking Kolonial Viking Alterative, in a short time my cough was gone and I was entirely well. I always thank God that I have had two slight attacks of pneumonia, but I have used Viking Alterative as a relief and cure, and cannot speak too highly for the good it has done."

(More elaborate; more on request.)

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many cases' test to be most efficacious in cases of acute Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in incipient Consumption. The Mistakes of Jennie

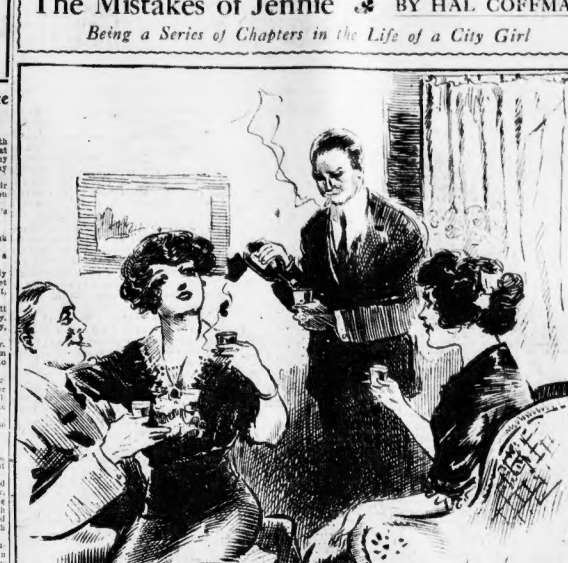
BY HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl



They Had Brought a Bottle of Cocktails

Chapter IX.

JENNIE'S new found girl friend at the office the next day told Jennie that she had "fixed" it up for them to go out on a "time" that evening with the two young men. Also that one of the young men had plenty of money, and she had known him for a long time—that they would go to the girl's room after work and get cleaned up and meet the boys later.

While they were dressing Jennie marveled how any girl getting seven dollars a week could have such a nice room and furniture—but the girl explained it was easy—if you knew HOW.

While they were dressing the two young men came in—without knocking—and seemed to be quite at home, especially—as Jennie's friend explained later—the one that had money.

He kissed Jennie's friend and she sat on his lap and smoked a cigarette. They had brought a bottle of cocktails, and after having one all around Jennie felt a little more at ease and wasn't quite so shocked at her friend for sitting on the young man's lap and smoking a cigarette.

Jennie's friend had put on another dress and but after seeing Jennie that made Jennie and her simple little gown feel very poor and cheap, indeed.

Why couldn't SHE have nice things, too—like the other girl? They were going down to the beach that night for dinner, and all the way Jennie kept thinking of the good clothes and the good times the other girl SEEMED to have. But the other girl had not told her of the many, many nights she had cried her eyes out and longed to be like she once was—a girl that was HAPPY and RESPECTED by the boys that knew her.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

By MAX

MAY 20—It is possible, I have learned recently, for a man to have as warm red blood in his veins at fifty as he had when he was twenty-five.

My conclusion from this decision is that no man is old enough to be trusted alone with a woman not his mother, his sister, his grandmother, or his aunt.

May 23—I regret that I am not a learned man. If I were I would know without the embarrassment of making the inquiry, who it was who said that "Kissing is the beginning of sinning."

May 26—If I knew who said "Kissing is the beginning of sinning," I might spend a few of my surplus millions in erecting a monument to his memory.

It would be a strange monument. It would not be beautiful, but I am sure it would be the only day since the dishonor, abandoned women, reckless men, broken hearts and the breaking up of homes.

ITS DANGER

I would have engraved on tablets set in every corner so that one might read, no matter from what direction he came, the real truth about the kiss. So sweet, so innocent, so pure in poem and prose. I would have scholars better versed in expression than I ever hope to be, tell what it is in real life when a man's blood runs warm in his veins.

And I would blame all the sin that has such an apparently innocent beginning on the ignorance of woman! Or, perhaps, I would grow so bold as to blame some of it on her cupidity, her duplicity and her UNDERSTANDING OF MEN.

She gives the first kiss in ignorance sometimes, but just as often, Diary (and I would have that engraved on the monument, though it would result in women smashing it over night), she gives it in full realization of its power and effect!

She uses the highest expression of love as a means of appealing to the lower!

I can't quite decide if I would have a broken-hearted girl as a crowning figure or a man bound and shackled with the chains of matrimony. Either figure could be made appealing by a sculptor who understands human nature.

Perhaps the bowed and bent figure of a man with the chains of matrimony wound around his limbs would be the more modern version of what a kiss had done for mankind. So many girls there days use kisses to cry their wares when they go to market, and suffer no appreciable damage, that the broken-hearted girl, as a crowning figure, would not give expression to the changed sentiment of the times.

May 28—The man who said "Kissing is the beginning of sinning" interests me. I wonder if he was an old bachelor like myself and had a good friend whom he loved as he would a favorite sister. I wonder if this friend ever came to him with her troubles because of a neglected husband, and if he tried, in honest, brotherly fashion, to soothe her.

I wonder if one day she suddenly kissed him, and I wonder if that kiss seemed in comparison to all others like had ever offered him, the one supreme kiss.

I wonder what he did next. I wonder how he found that "Kissing is the beginning of sinning."

Did his sin consist only in thinking about another man's wife much too often?

NOT PLATONIC

Did he accept it as the kiss a sister would give a brother? But no, he couldn't have done that. All the sisters since the world began never put into all the kisses they have given their brothers the one little vital spark Sally Spencer put in that kiss she gave me!

Brothers and sisters, bah! What's the good of self-deception? We were never brother and sister, and the kiss revealed we were not. Maybe once we were platonic friends, and that we can never be again!

When a man and woman do wrong, it is the customary thing, the gallant thing, and exceedingly proper, to blame it on the man.

Diary, I have kept nothing from you. I was sitting with Manette in my arms, and thinking only of Sally's trouble that day in the country. I had no thought of myself, but when a man says he has no thought of himself no one on earth believes him, so perhaps that statement is discredited even by your parchment leaf.

There was nothing in our conversation that would have led up to such a climax; there has never been in all the conversations I have had with her who kissed Mr. Diary. I did not kiss HER! How could I with Manette asleep in my arms? I could neither force a woman to kiss me under such conditions, nor could I resist when she forced me. Of course I could have screamed for help, I can see in that particular that I showed weakness and indecision of character in letting a man

But I couldn't scream before she kissed me, not realizing the awful degradation that had on me. And I couldn't scream when her lips were pressed against mine!

A SPECIAL APPARATUS

If you doubt the absolute inability to scream at such a psychological moment, ask any physician. He will tell you no man can scream when his wind is cut off. Then again, I am sure, though surgeons have never discovered it, that when the Lord made woman He put in her a special screaming apparatus He left out of man.

Had I kissed Sally Spencer against her will as one kissed me, somewhere (either just before the bestowal of the kiss, while it was being adjusted in position, or afterward) she would have found opportunity and breath for a scream.

That is, of course, if she had wanted to scream. My experience with the women is that they don't scream. It is the only lie the books that they cry for help.

Neither would it have done any good had I screamed after she kissed me, for what's the use of crying over spilled milk? I have been told all my life that there is absolutely no use.

So, as I said, we must follow tradition and blame all that may happen upon that kiss on the nape. I may be a man physically powerless to resist, but that makes no difference. I am the man, and therefore the guilty one.

All the tragedy that my arise from that kiss is to be blamed on me. That I know, and being a man and proud of my strength, I am telling myself every morning that I will not run from temptation. I will just hang around and take a look at it.

All of which I have told you, Diary, to explain why I am looking at Sally Spencer these days with different eyes, and am not one bit concerned as I was over the prospect that the widow may run off with my husband.

"WHAT do you think of the manager?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer, as he lured him a brace of fish cakes in the Cafe d'Enfant.

"He's a handsome brute," replied the Steady Customer. "I suppose you and Marie think he's just right, eh?"

Nobby! was the reply, adding the Head Waitress, "can't a girl admire a bloke without being thought to have lost her lesser right away. You give me a pain."

"Sorry," said the Steady Customer, "but it does get my goat a bit to think that while I'm away working and thinking of you and Marie, the new handsome manager may be whispering sweet nothings into your two pair of shell-like aural appendages."

"I suppose you mean ears, answered the Head Waitress. "Well, you needn't worry yourself any. He's a perfect gentleman and can't take no advantage of his superior position. All he speaks of is orders and business."

GREAT WILL POWER

"Then he's got more will power than I have," said the Steady Customer, "for if I was here all day with you and Marie I just would."

"Be that both outside," she interrupted. "You know you don't mean a word of it. Besides, me and Marie and tell her the same things. The old proverb concerning is the best policy" was never handled in your category."

"What?" gasped the Steady Customer, sadly. "What's that?"

"Oh," snapped the Head Waitress, "you don't think that I don't know all them big words. I've got a friend who's a domino in a night school, and I heard him say it the other day. He told me I held first place in his category of pretty girls. Some compliment that."

"Well, I'm," said the Steady Customer, sadly. "That's out of my class. Gimme my check. That's clean taken away my appetite."

Marie, he said to the cashier as he stepped to the desk, "I'm going to get big words from now on. Where did she get that word category?"

A COLLEGE BLOKE.

"I guess the new manager taught her," said Marie, "I think he's a college bloke. Anyway he looks like one.

"I trust he doesn't admire you overmuch," said the Steady Customer. "I feel horribly jealous for I thought—"

"Aw, tell that to the chickens," said Marie.

Lest We Forget

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"TELL me what comes when this baby of your mother's will be gone, and reckoned with wrinkles. Take care, while you are young, that you can think in those days, to have fashioned a hair of her dear head—I never marked a more cheerful line in her face." For all the many things that you think of when you are grieved, you had better have THAT by you.—Heath House.

THIS day after a child bursts his shell he is scrutinizing with sturdy little fists the world into which he has come to find that great big creature which is both his mother and his home for protection and shelter, and over the indulgences of babyhood are not greatest him long. Independence comes with his pin feathers and before he is half grown both his mother has cast him both out and off.

In every form of life but the highest the maternal love lasts no longer than the helplessness of its object. In the highest maternal love lasts as long as life itself.

If no form of life in the sea soon as it begins to walk upon the ground has a family, and in no form of life does this helplessness continue so indistinctly as in man and digital stretch into months and the months prolong themselves into years. Not for a single human family does it remain helpless, to be fed, to be bathed, to be clothed, to be watched over day and night, and to be guarded through every hour from peril and evil.

And the one upon whom this task falls is the MOTHER. If by some unhappy chance it falls upon any one else, the days of the helplessness of its object are cut short, and it is turned out while its legs are still wobbly and its eyes by no one experience the hard walks of life.

It is good to think of these things. And we forget! How dobbed we owe to the one who gave us life. It is good to note with appreciative eyes the patience of the young mother with the fretful child. It is good to observe the charity she shows for his waywardness, the vigil she holds over him through the night, the whisper ever one else in the world has forgotten that such a nation as this baby exists.

It is good "lest we forget" to note her unflinching to make observation of the faultless of her spiritual and creative comforts and regard them as a matter of all. It is good "lest we forget" to note that in the unconscious we make of our minds of the faithfulness with which she clings to her children when they have grown to be men and all the world but her has cast them off.

It is good, my dear girls, to remember that the only way in which you can hope to let the memory of what your mother has done for you and the quiet of what she has made ready for you fill her timid hands are folded in idleness for the dear time almost ago because a mother. It is good to remember that the child of to-morrow's world will be largely what it is determined by your attitude toward her every hour of the day.

"Lest we forget, my dear, it is good that you remember this and more.

It is good that you take care, while you are still young, that you can think in those days, if never whitened a hair in your head, if never furrowed a line in her face.

TOO OF ALL THE MANY THINGS THAT YOU CAN THINK OF WHEN YOU ARE GROWN, YOU HAD BETTER HAVE THAT BY YOU.

THE BEAUTY HUNTER HER HINTS TO OTHERS

CLEARING THE SKIN. Red rough skin, often of the tissue texture of the blood and complexion, can be greatly improved by the following: Pimples, sore mouth and inflamed, lack of energy and appetite and that nervous feeling are all due to impure blood. Purify the blood. Remember a healthy body means a healthy skin. Take Sulphur Bitters. Sulphur Bitters is a wonderful blood purifier. Take Sulphur Bitters before each meal and before retiring.

DANDRUFF. Dandruff is caused by a germ. The germ of dandruff is found on the scalp. It will surely kill the hair. Falling hair is a sure sign that dandruff is present. The germ which I have found most practical for cure of dandruff and brittle hair, as well as a beautifier of the hair, is Parisian Sage. Parisian Sage is made from 7 rare botanic products discovered by a famous botanist of Germany. Parisian Sage is guaranteed to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, and to produce a luxuriant growth of hair. Parisian Sage is delightful to use. Get a large 50-cent bottle at any druggist or toilet counter.

MAKING EYES BRILLIANT—Soothe, fresh, strengthen and supercharge absolutely any one of the complex eye lotions which are now on the market. Inflamed, weak or smarting eyes and eyelids immediately relieved by a few drops of this soothing, cooling lotion. Any druggist can get orders from any druggist.

WRINKLE REMOVER—Remove wrinkles and crow's feet around the eyes and other wrinkles in a few days by using the following: Get an ounce of powdered saxolite, dissolve in a pint of hot water and add a piece of cheese cloth. Apply to wrinkled surface and leave through night. Use a small piece of the cheese cloth as a massage. This treatment will remove and prevent wrinkles. Get rid of wrinkles or finest crow's feet, while softening the skin to a velvety texture.

Foundling Finds Home on Maine Farm

BANGOR, Me., June 11.—County officers are endeavoring to establish the identity of a few days' old baby boy, who was left on the doorsteps of Noel Phillips' farm-house, six miles from here, last Friday night, by a man and woman who came in an automobile.

The baby was dressed in expensive underclothing and was wrapped in a shawl to which was pinned an envelope with with "Mr. and Mrs. Overlock" written on it in pencil. A scrap of paper saying "Born May 28, 1913," was found tucked under the doorstep.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose A. Overlock, the Phillips' daughter and son-in-law, live with Phillips, and Mrs. Overlock says she will adopt the baby.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were up at the opening of the Boston and New York markets this morning, prices on this side of the Atlantic following the London lead. American issues ranged much higher there although the contago rate at 3 per cent. was ½ higher than at the previous settlement. Canadian Pacific advanced substantially.

The London market had an advanced tone, but it is said that several firms were assisted to avert further failures. It is reported that an American arbitrage firm was among the concerns believed to be embarrassed. Many bear and different accounts were disclosed in the settlement.

New York More Cheerful

Trading sentiment was more cheerful in New York when the market there opened and the influence of the Minnesota Rate Case had evidently expended its force. International issues ranged from a fraction to more than a point higher. London was a good buyer and many who were on the bear side yesterday covered this morning, taking the gains were: Amalgamated, 1½; Utah Copper, ¾; Colorado Fuel & Iron, 1; Lehigh Valley, 1¾; Union Pacific, 1¼; Atchison, ¼; Baltimore & Ohio, 1⅜; Great Northern preferred, ¾; Steel common, ⅝; Southern Railway, ⅝; Reading, ⅝; Chino Copper, ⅝, and California Petroleum, ⅛. The lone weak spot was Chesapeake & Ohio, which was keenly watched because of the mysterious pressure which has been exerted against it of late, opened at 36, or 1⅜ over Tuesday's final. Chicago & Northwestern was up ⅝, Louisville & Nashville was one of the few stocks which did not respond to the sympathetic wave of strength, losing ¼. Frisco second preferred lost ¼. At 10:30 Union Pacific had sold up to 141 from a previous top of 140⅝. Southern Pacific sold at 90¼ for a gain of ½. Missouri Pacific, which yesterday sold down to the lowest level since the death of Jay Gould, opened half higher. The Curb was steady.

Among mining issues to show good gains during the first hour in Boston were Calumet & Arizona, which sold Old Dominion, while Osceola declined two points. United Fruit gained 1 and Boston Elevated was higher. New Haven advanced 1⅛.

Court Control of Railroads.

If Congress should pass any such legislation as the Hinebaugh resolution indicates it would mean much to railroad managements. It might mean the financing of the kind which is blamed for throwing the St. Louis & San Francisco into the hands of receivers, and would place insolvent lines under the control of courts for the protection of stockholders, besides giving the Interstate Commerce Commission supervisory powers over security issues.

In regard to the 'Frisco road, Representative Hitchcock proposes that the Speaker of the House appoint a special committee of nine members which shall investigate the causes for the receivership of the railroad, the conduct and management of the road and the issue of securities for at least one year prior to the receivership.

The Slump in Europe.

Reports from Europe regarding the recent slump in securities indicates that the Balkan situation is still progressing and that the monetary stringency in Germany has been a factor affecting American stocks. It has helped send discount rates higher in London and the demand for gold is a feature of the foreign situation.

The London market had a trying time yesterday and W. R. Lawson, financial correspondent there for Hearst newspapers, cables that "fresh troubles quite possible, but when the new account is fairly started, a sharp rally is expected in Paris and Berlin," he says, "still maintain the legend that millions of capital are locked up in private hoards waiting only for confidence to return. London is beginning to suspect that these millions are mythical.

"Most dealers in stocks have overextended themselves and many must go before the existing strain is relieved. Political trouble is also unsettling the markets. It is announced that the usual sinking serious should happen, no strong business men are at the head of affairs to face it. The prospect of a Parliamentary collapse grows more likely every day. This would mean a break of four or five weeks in regular business while the general election was held."

It is reported from Berlin that the decline of German Imperial 4s to 87 is the net figure ever known in causing fear that the new Imperial loan will fail, but with the Imperial Bank has increased its hoard of gold by about $5,300,000.

Trying to "Save Its Face."

A Washington dispatch says that the United States Senate is, to quote a Chinese expression, trying "to save its face." Irritated by the knowledge that the public has been informed of the dictation of the terms of the tariff bill by President Wilson, the Senate Finance Committee has attempted to remove that impression, an official statement issued by Chairman Simmons it was admitted that the President had "strong convictions with respect to placing sugar and wool on the free list." Beyond that, this official announcement declares the President has expressed views only when asked and has "not in any way attempted to dictate to the committee."

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened steady with spot up 5s. 6d., and futures 5s. higher.

There is little market for copper at present, according to reports, although second hands offered the metal yesterday at 15 cents cash.

Thompson, Towle & Co. quote Joseph Clendenin, copper sales manager and director of the American Smelting & Refining Co., who arrived Monday from Europe, as saying in regard to the European situation: "European consumption was never greater than when I was over in May. This condition of activity in the metal prevailed all over Europe and the general feeling that at least as much copper would be consumed this year as last year."

Financial News in Brief.

R. S. Lovett, chairman of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, has gone to St. Paul to attend the Harriman dissolution hearing on Thursday.

United Cigar Stores sales for May exceeded 1913's best by 20 per cent. 1912's best by 20 per cent.

Representative O'Shaugnessy of Rhode Island has introduced in Congress a resolution directing the Secretary of State to investigate the American interest in the Argentine cattle business. This is one result of reports that the Beef Trust has obtained control of the Argentine export cattle supply, as well as facilities for handling it.

Roads Not Alarmed at Rate Decision

Take View Different from State Street, Says B. C. Forbes.

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

I learn from an authoritative source that the United States Supreme Court justices keenly resented the Attorney-General's eleventh hour intrusion into the rate cases as a pleader for extension of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The court's reply, in effect, given in its decision is:

Congress can clothe the Commission with any new powers it may see fit, but we will not.

The Wilson administration has thus been placed on the horns of a new dilemma. It must either incur State enmity by passing fresh legislation, placing railroad rate control in the hands of the Federal Commission, or it must leave the way open to chaos through a deluge of rate-making by forty-eight States, each bent upon getting all it can wring out of the railroads serving it.

Most railroad managers did not lose their heads yesterday. They are confident that necessity for undivided control of the country's railroads will be recognized by the public and the government, for, they point out, the great bulk of railroad traffic is interstate.

That some uncertainty will prevail, but "the constitution still stands" and confusion has not yet been legalized. That some common sense policy governing the whole country will have to be adopted is not doubted.

FORBES WARNS OF SCARCITY OF CAPITAL

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

Every dollar good stocks lose in price makes them not less attractive to investors. Don't forget that in contemplating yesterday's demoralization in the stock market.

The temptation to make purchases at current prices is very strong. Bargain hunters yesterday went off with a lot of stock which will yield generous returns.

Were the Minnesota decision the only, or chief, adverse influence I would without hesitation favor buying securities without one day's delay for the railroads will not be pounded into bankruptcy by the States without interference by the Federal government. Neither the administration nor the public could afford to stand idly by and watch the enactment of such a catastrophe.

But the world wide scarcity of capital is acute, and how the United States is to provide the funds necessary to market its enormous crops is not easily figured out.

The National City Bank of New York is piling up a reserve which can have but one meaning, namely, that this institution, the largest in the country, is fortifying itself against eventualities.

The Wilson administration is no longer regarded as alive to the strained conditions here and elsewhere. "There is not one experienced business man in the Wilson Cabinet," declared a man of large affairs yesterday. "If I wanted to talk on business subjects with the present government I would not know whom to approach. One of the government departments understands business conditions. It is a deplorable and a dangerous situation. But there it is.

The ill starred plan to punish big business, by the way, is dead. Advices from Washington give assurances that no more will be heard of the Attorney-General's scheme to tax the leading tobacco companies to death. It is whispered that, if any serious upheaval occurs in the business world, Mr. McReynolds may be made the scapegoat by the administration, owing to his anti-trust activities.

The annual outing of the Bay State Automobile Association, which is scheduled for Lake Spofford, N. H., on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, promises to be the best attended outing in the history of the organization.

The Railroads Must Pay to End Their Murderous Grade Crossings.

If the Railroads Had Spent Less Money in Dishonest Politics They Would Have More for the Requirements of Their Honest Business

To the Editor of the Boston AMERICAN:

I note in Tuesday's AMERICAN an excellent editorial reference to the fact that the railroads of the United States are responsible for the rather stern and uncompromising attitude of the public toward them.

As a matter of fact, even more could be said and more positively said along this line and in support of the position of the State of New Jersey that the railroads must protect the lives of the citizens at the murderous railway crossings.

Unquestionably the railroads must conduct all their business with due regard for the safety of the public, and they must take at their own expense the steps necessary to INSURE the safety of the public.

Mr. Rea's suggestion that the public pay for making the grade crossings safe is no more just than would be a suggestion that the public pay for safety couplings, or steel cars, or—in cases like the neglected and deteriorated New York and New Haven trackage—for new tracks.

Of course, the public pays for everything indirectly, but that is one reason and a good reason why it should not pay again directly.

If the railroads had issued less watered stock they would have less dividends to pay on water and would have enough money to keep up their equipment and modernize their conditions generally.

If they had spent less in subsidising Senators and bribing bosses, corrupting public service commissions and debauching the people's government, they would have more money to spend in conducting the legitimate functions of their business and maintaining satisfactory relations with the public.

Of all the bribing, bullying, corrupting and intimidating influences in the United States, the worst have been the railroads, and among the worst of the railroads, alongside the New York Central with its "public be damned" policy, and the New York and New Haven with its record of monopolistic extortion, stands the Pennsylvania Railroad, the convicted crony of Quay and acknowledged accomplice of Archbold in political corruption.

The Pennsylvania Railroad and the Standard Oil Company have made a rotten borough of the whole State of Pennsylvania—a borough so rotten that the State is known throughout the nation and throughout the world as a fearful example of the destructive evil of corrupt money in politics.

But, like most bullies, the railroads are cowards, and, after having kicked the public when it was down, now beg for mercy when the people are rising to a proper position of strength and power.

The railroads speak of "justice," but that is the last thing they want. They want no justice that they cannot control, no judge that they do not own.

Thus Mr. Rea asks that this question of safeguarding the railroad crossings be decided not by the people and their elected representatives—the people would be unwise and unjust—but by some appointed public service commission, composed of railroad attorneys, who would decide everything "justly" in favor of the railroads and get their reward in legitimate fees or honorable retainers then or thereafter.

But the people know the railroads, and they know the railroads' private public service commissions, and the railroad judges and the railroad public officials and political methods.

Knowing these things—and they may all be called "things"—the people are no longer leaving their business to unfaithful agents and corrupting agencies.

They are taking the control of affairs into their own hands. They are creating the referendum and the recall as part of their government. They are passing laws and establishing justice for all the people and not for any special and privileged class of the community.

There is a new order of things, and those corporations which attempt to maintain the old order of things are likely to be subjected to some severe but salutary discipline.

An economic republic is being established. An economic aristocracy is being deposed. Industry is being democratized. Bastilles of privilege are falling. Financial feudalism is passing. The seigneur of industry is losing some of his "divine rights" of outrage and oppression. The public will not "be damned" today any more than it would "eat grass" in Louis the Sixteenth's time.

Wise corporation leaders—and Mr. Rea in character and ability should be such a one—will abandon their claims to a superior order and a "divine right," will step down from their high estate, will mingle with the citizens on an equal footing and wear the tri-color cockade of liberty, equality and fraternity.

Advice

It's good advice, but how many poor mothers can follow it? Those who need to go to the country most are usually unable to accept the advice.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

FLOODS—THEIR CAUSE AND CURE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Floods are caused by the absence of foliage—the indiscriminate destruction of our forests and grassy slopes. Snow, ice and water—moisture—have no absorbing mass of foliage to soak up the flood at melting time, and, the hills being bare, the water floods down into the valleys and sweeps the soils with it. If these hills that are barren of absorbing foliage—through the greed of ignorant penny-grabbing and dollar-hoarding man—were covered by trees and vines and moss and ferns and flowers, as nature originally clothed them, the melting snow and ice would be absorbed by the foliage and there would be no unnatural floods.

It's all very simple, and the men who claim they do not know the cause of the damaging floods and who are trying to appropriate great State funds, government funds and personal (individual) funds to build so-called walls and cause-ways to "prevent" future floods are lying rascals, political grafters, gyping fakirs and would-be pilferers of the people's money.

The honest and practical way to prevent floods is to restore the foliage to the barren hills—plant trees and bushes on the unsightly mounds, put back what we have wrongfully taken away from nature—and the grafters who want to make pocket millions | deliver out of the fraudulent expense | building the silly walls and causeways know this better than any one else.

For the cost of every single stone or plank in the grafter's wall a thousand trees could be planted on the hills. Why not let our thousands of idle Indian children do their tree planting? They'd rather do this natural health work in the open than practice the white man's unnecessary, unnatural pursuit—the indoor study of silly arithmetic, etc.—in the paleface's stuffy, tuberculous-breeding schoolroom.

WOBBLY DIPLOMACY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Diplomacy, "dollar" or otherwise, is simply the adaptation of the means to the end. Any different conception of it is not diplomacy. If President Wilson and his State Department have any other idea of the function of diplomacy, they might as well eliminate it as an arm of the government and establish a Bureau of Blunders.

It is obvious to the world that whatever its strength and sincerity in other directions, the Wilson administration is weak and wobbly as far as the effective meeting and solution of international problems is concerned. Not through bad intentions, it is true, but through good intentions that do not fit the conditions that arise.

PITY THE WAGON HORSES

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Observant of the interest frequently expressed in the columns of your widely circulated newspaper in matters humane, as well as human, may I be permitted a small space in one of those columns on behalf of something that especially attends in wood of our consideration at this approaching trying season of the year, and that is the unfortunate express horses of our city?

For them I would make a simple appeal not only to those citizens who in their impatience make unreasonable and cruel demands for speed service from man and beast alike, but to those drivers who, in an unconscious effort, perhaps, to keep up with this demand, urge their animals on over hard and hot asphalted streets at an incessant pace that is beyond the very endurance of life itself.

'Tis true the day is fast approaching when all such conveyances will be propelled by motor power, but in the meantime we still have some horses with us, creatures of a lowlier estate than our own, but who nevertheless in their turn have served us faithfully and well, both in a commercial as well as scientific capacity.

NO HONOR IN WEAKNESS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I am glad you do not treat this Japanese question as some of your competitors do. The same papers have always been opposed to the increase of the navy. Just now the only way to have respect is to have strength. Weakness sometimes gets pity, but never honor.

Getting Ahead—The First Step Is to Do Your Work Well—Don't Despise Any Occupation—Character Is the Foundation of All Success

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE very first step toward getting on in life is to do the work before you today in the best manner and with as much perfection as is possible for you.

It may be work you feel is beneath you; work which is uncongenial and distasteful; but the only way to reach better employment is to do the thing you know must be done, and rise by the accomplished task to something beyond it.

You who are employed in any kind of work no doubt consider your life full of hardships.

You wish you were in a position to hire help, and then you feel you would be happy.

But stop and examine yourself, and think whether you are doing very much to make your employer happy.

Are you studying your especial order of work and mastering it in such a way as to be a real assistant?

If you are an office boy you should in a week's time at longest learn what your duties are, and you should be able to do them regularly and promptly without bothering your employer by questions which have been answered before.

I know a business man who went to his office with his mind burdened with important matters which needed his concentrated attention for several hours.

Stealing Another Person's Time Is Absolutely Criminal

His office boy had been given a message to deliver, and came back from the elevator to ask again about the address, as he feared he had mistaken the number.

A clerk had been given a parcel to post in a box, but he had mislaid it, and came to the employer to ask if he had seen it.

When found, the object was discovered to have a slight blemish. It was the business of the clerk to remove the blemish, or to find a duplicate object, but he interrupted his employer to ask what should be done about it.

Then the office boy came back to say that the man he was sent to see had moved, and to ask how he should go to his new address, by elevated or trolley.

Neither the office boy nor the clerk realized the absolute criminality of his conduct—for it is a crime to steal and take what is not ours; and another man's time and brain energy are not ours when we are paid to help him keep them for his own uses. It is doubtful if the boy or the clerk will ever be in a position to understand the matter, since by their failure to use their own wits and do their own work they will not be able to reach any responsible position in the world.

Do Whatever You Attempt with All Your Mind and Might

Now, whatever you are doing, do with all your mind and force and energy.

Do not despise your occupation and wish you had a higher calling, and rush through what you are doing in a slipshod manner, nor shift it upon other shoulders. If you are a clerk, or a housemaid, or a secretary, or a cook, or a stenographer, or a governess, or a man or woman of all work, find out in the beginning what your duties are to be, and get at them and get through with them without bothering anybody.

Consider your duties the important ones of the world until you have them accomplished.

No matter if you are a bootblack or a floor scrubber, go about the shoes and the floor in dead earnest.

Do not ask anybody to find your shoes brush or your floor mop for you—find it for yourself. Do your own work, do it well, and if you have ambitions for higher employment, expect it. It will never come to you if you half do what you are now attempting.

Try to be broad-minded enough to realize that those who employ you need your efficient aid, and that unless you can take all mental anxiety about your work from them you are only half earning your salary or wages, and are guilty of a species of dishonesty when you take your pay in full.

If you are paid for carrying mortar up a ladder and your employer has to go along behind you each trip to see that you carry it, you should share your wages with him.

It is exactly so in every other department. If you make your employer do half your thinking for you, you only earn half your money.

Your life may seem a hard one, and his easy; yet you will never make your lot better by shifting the duties he pays you to do upon his shoulders.

You Never Lose Anything by Doing Your Work Well

Even if you are working for an unappreciative employer, you are not losing anything by doing all your duty, mentally and physically; you are building your own character, and that will lead to better positions for you by and by.

Think about whatever you are doing, and if you are merely sent upon an errand, let nothing prevent your accomplishing it short of an earthquake or a tidal-wave.

And every morning of your life say a little prayer of gratitude to the Invisible Powers, for giving you something to do. No matter how distasteful the work, how inferior to the employment of your imagination, be thankful for it; and know by this sense of gratitude, that you are preparing your mental ground for better things.

Horticulturists and tillers of the ground fish in the salt water for seaweed and cast it on the earth to fertilize it.

Cast your net into the ocean of infinity, and bring up the seaweed of thanks for what you have; and from the soil of your soul will grow rich new harvests.

THE BACK-YARD STOCK FARM

By WEX JONES

The Bureau of Fisheries has issued a bulletin telling how to keep terrapin in a back yard.

I USED to dine on corned beef hash, pot roast or Irish stew,
For rent was high and food was high, and dollars mighty few;
But now the Fisheries' bulletin has changed all that for me,
And I eat the choicest products of the marshes and the sea.
My yard is full of terrapin; I grow oysters in a pail;
And, with a bigger bathtub, I think I'd keep a whale.*
The laundry tubs hold lobsters; a seal swims round the sink;
For the missus says a sealskin coat is twice as good as mink.

We have the best of sea-food, and it costs us nothing now,
But we're waiting for a bulletin on "The Front Porch for a Cow."
And, oh, dear Government, believe a hungry nation begs
For tips on "How Canaries Can Be Made to Lay Hen's Eggs."
"How to Raise Hogs in Rolltop Desks" would slash the cost of living,
And "A Way to Feed Sheep on Ashes" would greatly cheapen lamb.
So now we all have terrapin, let us haste the happy day
When we can eat the best of grub without a thought of pay.
*For whalebone, Corsets, you know.
